Air Force 'service' costing taxpayers $6 million annually—Proxmire

WASHINGTON (AP) — The world's most exclusive airline is operated by the U.S. Air Force and the American taxpayers keep it running to the tune of $6 million a year, says Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis.

Proxmire said the Air Force keeps a fleet of 23 plush jets, which cost $66.7 million, on 24-hour call to transport government officials wherever they want to go. He said the fleet of planes is known as the 89th Military Airlift Wing and is stationed at Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington.

It will fly top government officials any place in the world, said Proxmire in a statement today.

"All they need do is call up and request a flight," he said.

Proxmire, who has been making monthly "golden fleece" awards for government waste, cited the Air Force's executive airline for "the fleece of the year."

But he added that "in fairness to the Air Force, this fleece of the year should also be shared by all the government bigshots who insist on such special treatment at the expense of the taxpayers."

Proxmire said that "in the first 10 months of 1975, the 89th made 975 flights carrying government officials as passengers at a cost of over $6 million.

"Not surprisingly, 849 or 87 per cent of these flights were undertaken for high ranking defense officials or those requesting Defense Department flights."

A table he gave breaking down the flights by departments and agencies listed about 100 of these 849 flights as congressional trips requested by Senate and House members.

The next largest users shown on the table were the Treasury Department with 67 flights and the State Department with 26.

"The most frequent single user of this most exclusive airline in the world was William Simon, Secretary of the Department of the Treasury," Proxmire said.

"According to Air Force records, Mr. Simon took 58 flights the first 10 months of 1975 at a government cost of $328,794.10. This averages out to $5,669 a flight.

"Other frequent users have been Deputy Secretary of Defense William Clements, then Secretary of the Army Howard Callaway, Federal Energy Administrator Frank G. Zarb, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Navy Secretary William Middendorf.

"The stupidity of this massive airlift is that in almost every case, commercial flights were available to the same destination."

Proxmire said commercial flights could not only save the government hundreds of thousands of dollars, if not millions, but would help the depressed airline industry.

Postage stamps raised to 13 cents Wednesday

Court's decision clears the way

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service is raising the cost of mailing a letter from 10 to 13 cents on Wednesday, three days after it originally planned to increase postal rates.

The service announced the higher rates on Monday after the U.S. Court of Appeals cleared a legal barrier to the rate increase.

The appeals court stayed an order by U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica prohibiting the Postal Service from raising rates. The higher court is expected to decide later on the merits of the case, but the stay allows postal rates to go up in the meantime.

Under the rates that take effect at 12:01 a.m. local time Wednesday, a first-class letter will cost 13 cents for the first ounce and 11 cents for each additional ounce. A post-card will increase from 7 to 9 cents and parcel post rates will go up an average of 10.1 per cent.

Other increases are 22.1 per cent for second class mail and 23.9 per cent for third-class bulk rates.

The three-judge appeals court issued the stay after a government lawyer said the Postal Service would be unable to meet its Feb. 6 payroll if it were not allowed an immediate postal rate increase.

Under present rates, the Postal Service is losing $7 million per day. Even with the higher rates, the Postal Service expects to have its highest deficit in history during this fiscal year.

Postmaster General Benjamin F. Bailar has said that the Postal Service's chronic deficit may lead to reductions in service, including elimination of Saturday deliveries and special delivery.

Justice Department lawyer Neil Koslowe, representing the Postal Service, said Sirica's ruling would create a crisis for the service if allowed to stand.

DAMAGED A lone police rescue officer scans debris at New York's LaGuardia Airport Monday night after a powerful explosion demolished a terminal baggage area. At least 11 persons died

$50,000 reward for 'mad bomber'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's airlines today offered a $50,000 reward for information leading to the conviction of those responsible for Monday night's deadly explosion at LaGuardia Airport.

Meanwhile, the government formed a task force to determine its effects on aviation security.

Transportation Secretary William T. Coleman and John L. McLucas, head of the Federal Aviation Administration, said they were advised of the reward by Paul R. Ignatius, president of the Air Transport Association, who said it would be offered jointly by the scheduled airlines.

The explosion that killed at least 11 persons was the city's biggest bomb blast in recent memory, a police bomb expert said today. He said it had the force of about 75 sticks of dynamite.

The explosion Monday night sent a deadly shower of metal and glass shrapnel through the baggage area crowded with holiday travelers. More than 50 persons were injured, some critically.

There was no warning and no firm clue who might have planted the bomb in a metal baggage locker, police said. They added that the device was apparently a time bomb and was probably dynamite but that it may have been a plastic explosive.

Originally, police said the blast had the force of 20 to 25 sticks of dynamite. They said it was meant to "maim or kill."

Investigators said they were interviewing "a couple" witnesses and any individuals such as taxi drivers who were in the area.

"As in all of these things, witnesses' accounts vary," a sergeant in the police bomb section said.

Police said they were discounting the significance of a reports that two men in their late teens or early 20s were seen running from the scene minutes before the explosion.

The blast at 6:33 p.m. sent airline passengers and their friends and relatives fleeing the mayhem in panic. The airport was closed down, forcing the cancellation or diversion of at least 45 flights and disrupting the plans of about 5,000 travelers. The earliest it was to be opened was 10 p.m. tonight.

Investigators searched the debris for even the smallest clue and bent to the task of identifying the dead.

At midmorning, the known dead were: Bymun Patterson, 37, of Sanford, Conn.; Frank Musicaro, 48, of Bayshore, N.Y.; Edythe Bull, 72, Brevard, N.C.; Ronald Presslaff, 32, Long Beach, N.Y., and Donald Kochersperger, 57, Greenwich, Conn.

The disaster also triggered bogus bomb threats at airports in other major cities. Three, including Washington's National Airport, were evacuated.

"It was the most heart-sickening thing I ever saw in my life," said Richard Siemers, who was about to see his daughter's family off to Tulsa, Okla. "Bodies were all over ... puddles of blood on the island between the building and the parking lot ... it seemed like everyone was in shock."

The explosion set off a smoky fire in the baggage area shared by Trans World and Delta airlines, but officials said that flying glass and metal accounted for most of the deaths and injuries. Metal doors were ripped away and glass from 10-foot high windows was found the equivalent of several city blocks from the blast.

Sharman Barker of Brooklyn, who was waiting for her sister to arrive from Kansas, was still sobbing as she recalled "the big noise and glass shattering."

"Women and children were screaming," she said. "And then a woman next to me was just dead, bleeding all over."

Eight of the injured were seriously hurt and rushed to operating rooms in local hospitals.

EUELL GIBBONS

Naturalist Euell Gibbons succumbs

SUNBURY, Pa. (AP) — Euell Gibbons, an author and naturalist who praised the virtues of eating wild nuts and berries and became a national folk hero among natural food lovers, is dead at 64.

Freda Gibbons, his widow, said Gibbons died Monday night of an apparent heart attack.

Gibbons first became widely known through books which included "Stalking The Wild Asparagus," "Stalking the Blue Eyed Scallop," and "Stalking the Healthful Herbs."

His easy wit and rustic appearance gained him a wide following as he began making appearances on television talk shows. He later received a contract from General Foods to advertise its breakfast cereals and was often seen holding stalks of wild grains.

However, the Federal Trade Commission ruled last July that the commercials should be taken off the air because they tended "to undercut a commonly recognized safety principle, namely that children shouldn't eat any plants found growing or in natural surroundings, except under adult supervision."

Gibbons developed an ulcer in 1974. However, he said at the time it wasn't from anything he ate but from aspirins he took for arthritis.

Throughout his life, Gibbons was a nature lover. He taught survival courses, lectured throughout the country on nature and lived for a time as a beachcomber in Hawaii.

"Everybody, when they're young, is interested in the outdoors and nature, but society has trained them to grow out of that," he said in a 1974 interview. "I stayed with it."

Gibbons was fond of quoting jokes told on him by comedian Bob Hope. One line went, "Euell Gibbons' is the only house in America where they have two Christmas trees. There's one to put up and the other to serve for Christmas dinner."

Born in Texas, Gibbons completed only five years of formal education. He later attended the University of Hawaii and in 1948, at the age of 36, won a literary prize as the best creative writer in the Hawaiian Islands.

It was in Hawaii that he met his second wife, the former Freda Fryer of Philadelphia.

Valley postal chiefs won't be 'hard-nosed'

Although postal increases go into effect at 12:01 a.m. Wednesday throughout the nation, most valley residents will be able to use the old rates until the end of the year.

Local postmasters say they are "not going to be hard-nosed" about enforcing the new rates instantly. They said they did not expect a heavy rush to beat the higher rates.

"If we find any letters in pickup boxes tomorrow, we'll assume they were dropped there before the deadline," Ontario Postmaster Charles Link said. "I think most postmasters in the area will follow that procedure."

Residential pickups are made once a day. In the business and commercial areas, where more than one pickup is made daily, the first pickup will count Wednesday.

But it will be a different situation at post offices and at residences, according to the postmasters.

Pomona Postmaster Warren Lynch said those who post their mail at the postoffices will have to do so by 3:30 a.m. to get by with the lower rates.

And those whose mail is picked up from residential boxes had better not be home when the mailman comes.

The postmasters say they have instructed their carriers to call attention to the higher rates, if they find anyone at home, but Link said "we're not really going to be hard-nosed about it."

After midnight tonight first class mail goes up from 10 cents to 13 cents; post cards will go up from 7 to 9 cents and parcel post mailing costs will rise 10 per cent.

Weather

Partly cloudy tonight, fair Wednesday with gusty northerly winds. High today 68, low tonight 38 high Wednesday 65. The high Monday was 74 and the overnight low was 40 Wednesday's sunrise 6:56, sunset 4:52.

Local bank robbed of $1,904

A middle-aged bandit wearing baggy pants and a straw hat robbed the Bank of America branch at 2475 N. Garey Ave. in Pomona Monday afternoon of $1,904, police reported.

The holdup occurred shortly after 1:30. Teller Debbie Ann Stanley, 20, said she was working at her station when she looked up and saw the man standing there.

She said he demanded $10s and $20s and when she said, "Pardon me?" he opened his jacket and pointed at an automatic pistol stuck in his waistband.

"See this?" he replied, and handed the young woman a paper sack for the money. She placed $20, $10, $5 and $2 bills inside.

The gunman, a Caucasian 45 to 50, started to turn away and as he did he attempted to say, "Happy New Year," but stuttered, the teller said. He did manage, "Merry Christmas" before exiting the bank's east door into Garey Avenue.

A witness later said she saw the man enter a white pickup truck parked outside containing another man. The pair drove away southbound. The truck was a late-model Chevrolet with a red stripe on the sides. Its license plate was covered with a piece of cardboard.

The robber was 5 feet 8, weighed 180 pounds and had black hair. He wore sunglasses, a tan jacket, dark trousers a plaid shirt and a tan straw hat.

Ruling against woman in rape killing voided

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Inez Garcia, whose case became a national cause celebre for women's groups, has been granted a new trial by an appeals court which reversed her conviction of murdering a man she said held her down while another raped her.

Mrs. Garcia, 30, was convicted in October 1974 of second degree murder and was sentenced to five years to life in prison. The courtroom was jammed by supporters who burst into tears as Monterey County Superior Court Judge Stanley Lawson, now retired, read the verdict.

"It's beautiful," said Mrs. Garcia when she was told of the decision at the California Institution for Women at Frontera. "I'm very happy about it."

The California Court of Appeals held Monday that Lawson erred in issuing a supplemental instruction to the jury on the definition of reasonable doubt and cited a U.S. Supreme Court decision which held:

"It is critical that the moral force of the criminal law not be diluted by a standard of proof that leaves people in doubt whether innnocent men are being condemned."

The appeals court noted that Mrs. Garcia admitted killing Miguel Jiminez and as result Lawson refused to permit the facts of the case to be raised as an issue, an action hotly protested by demonstrators.

INEZ GARCIA

Mrs. Garcia testified that Louis Castillo and the 300-pound Jiminez came looking for a man with whom she was sharing an apartment. She said Castillo raped her while Jiminez held her down.

A few minutes later, she said, she loaded her son's .22 caliber rifle, hunted down her alleged assailants and shot Jiminez dead.

The appeals court said the jury at first was properly instructed on the principle of "reasonable doubt" but that the court then amplified that instruction by adding the following:

"In other words, reasonable doubt means just what the term implies, doubt based upon reason, doubt that presents itself in the minds of reasonable people who are weighing the evidence in the scales, one side against the other, in a logical manner in an effort to determine wherein lies the truth."

The appellate court said the supplemental instruction was a mistake.

"It called upon the jury to weigh 'the evidence in the scales ... in an effort to determine wherein lies the truth,' and thus the guilt or innocence of the accused. This weighing process, where a tipping of the scales determines the 'truth,' is wholly foreign to the concept of proof beyond a reasonable doubt," the justices said.

As to whether the error was harmless, the court said, "from the instructions given by the trial court, it appears that there was some evidence that Inez Garcia had acted with a lack of 'malice' or under 'heat of passion' without sufficient provocation, or under diminished capacity caused by voluntary intoxication.

"Such evidence, if found true by the jury, would have called for a verdict of guilty of the lesser crime of manslaughter. Other evidence that she was not 'conscious' of the homicidal act or that she acted in self defense, would if found true by the jury have required a verdict of not guilty."

Camarillo brush blaze halted

CAMARILLO (AP) — A 2,500-acre brush fire set off by a road flare has been controlled after burning to the walls of a mental institution, fire officials say.

A spokesman for the Ventura County Fire Department said the fire was brought under control Monday night.

"We know it's a flare but we don't know if it was set off on purpose or by accident," a department spokesman said.

Officials said there was no damage to structures. Three minor injuries were reported among 350 fire fighters, who contained the blaze before noon Monday. Mop up operations were continuing late Monday night.

The blaze started Sunday night, and with dry, gusty Santa Ana winds fanning it, it spread quickly over an unpopulated hillside.

A physical barrier was constructed within the California State Hospital at Carmarillo to fight the flames, which burned to the edge of the facility.

A county fire inspector said, "The fire came right close to the buildings. We had engines right in there protecting the buildings — between the buildings and the fire."

The radar station on the hillside by the Pacific Ocean near the Naval missile and airbase at Point Mugu had been threatened earlier. In addition, the fire had threatened several structures on the Broome Ranch which stretches inland from Point Mugu.

TIPPING CHANGE — Nearly 300,000 California workers in certain service industries will get a pay break Jan. 1 under a new state law that forbids employers from applying tips or gratuities toward wages or deducting any amount from employes' wages because tips are received.

The new law, signed by Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. last August, rescinds the authority of the state Industrial Welfare Commission to permit employers to deduct up to 25 cents an hour in tips from the state minimum wage of $2 per hour.

Brent Hogshead, senior deputy for the state labor commission office in Pomona, said employers should be aware of the new law that protects wages of those customarily receiving tips for services. These include taxi drivers, baggage porters and bellhops, barbers, hairdressers, cosmetologists, bartenders, bootblacks, waiters and waitresses.

PARENTS ANONYMOUS — Participants in Parents Anonymous, a self-help program for the treatment and prevention of child abuse, meet each Wednesday from 6 to 8 p.m. at the Kaiser-Permanente Medical Center at 9961 Sierra Ave., Fontana.

The meetings are held to create a positive alternative to destructive attitudes and actions in parent-child relationships, said Dr. Guy Hartman, pediatrician and initiator of the group.

At the sessions, parents informally discuss their attitudes with each other and explore the nature of their problems with others who have similar problems, he added.

TO LAS VEGAS — The Dalton Aires, a senior citizens club, is planning a trip to Las Vegas on Jan. 12, 13 and 14.

The cost is $35 per person. For more information, persons may phone Mrs. J. Walker, president, at 963-2387.

BUS SERVICE — The Southern California Rapid Transit District will provide special bus service for residents wanting to go to the Rose Parade in Pasadena on Jan. 1.

Buses on Line 60 will depart from San Bernardino Road and 11th Ave., Upland, at 6:15 a.m.; Indian Hill Boulevard and First St., Claremont, at 6:30 a.m.; the Ontario station at 6:15, and 6:40 a.m.; and the Pomona station, at 6:10, 6:30, 6:45 and 6:55 a.m.

Buses on Line 402 will depart from the Pomona station at 6:30 a.m.; Bonita Avenue and D Street, La Verne, at 6:40 a.m.; and Bonita and San Dimas avenues, San Dimas, at 6:43 a.m.

Passengers are reminded to bring the exact fare since drivers don't carry change. Buses will reverse their routes on the return trips.

Fare from Pomona and Claremont is $2 one way, and from Upland and Ontario, $2.25.

LONGER HOURS — The Great Western Savings and Loan Association reports its Pomona office at 300 Pomona Mall West will now be open from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., Mondays through Fridays, and 9:30 to 3 p.m. on Saturdays.

"Convenience for our customers is the primary reason behind our new extended business hours," said Evy Melgaard, office manager.

To help celebrate the new hours, the association is displaying a collection of Seth Thomas "heirlooms of tomorrow" clocks.

Milk quota speculation restricted

SACRAMENTO (AP) — New regulations aimed at reducing speculation in dairy farm milk "quota" have been announced by state Agriculture Director L. T. Wallace.

The rules, effective say that any "quota" allocated by the director in the future may not be transferred by producers for two years.

"Quota" allows dairymen to sell milk as Class 1, for drinking purposes. Normally that brings a higher price than the lower three classes, which are used in creams, butter, cheese, powder and other manufactured products.

The first "quota" was issued by the state free to 2,500 dairymen in 1969. It has grown in value to about $500 million, and about $100 million worth has changed hands.

The state plans to issue a small amount of new "quota" in January, the first in three years.

The state's original proposal to change the rules provided for a five-year embargo on transfer of new quota.

State holiday death toll 35

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Thirteen additional fatalities in the 24-hour period ending at 6 a.m. Sunday brought the total holiday traffic death toll in California to 35, highway patrol spokesman said.

The holiday period, which started at 6 p.m. on Christmas Eve, ends at 6 a.m. Monday morning, the CHP said.

Fire truck deaths held accidental

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The accident in which a fire truck went out of control and killed three persons on a crowded street was "non-preventable" because of defects in the pavement and streetcar tracks, the fire department says.

A committee of fire officials said in its report released Monday on the Dec. 5 incident that it found "no evidence of negligence nor poor judgment or improper actions" on the part of either the truck driver or tillerman.

The three victims, along with three persons seriously injured, were swept off a streetcar island on Market Street by the tail section of the 20-ton truck that was responding to a nearby fire.

The panel said the driver testified he was traveling between 20 and 25 miles per hour and the tillerman said the steering wheel was firmly in his grasp until he encountered "rough road conditions" that caused the mishap.

Only recommendations made by the committee were that streetcar tracks and pavement be "placed in good working order."

Business tax petition fails

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A proposal to require a two-thirds vote of the legislature to change any tax has failed to qualify for the June primary ballot.

Secretary of State March Fong Eu said Monday a survey of county clerks showed that no petitions had been filed by business interests who were backing the proposal.

It was put forward to counter a proposal, put on the June ballot by the legislature, which would lower the vote on bank and corporation tax changes to a simple majority.

Judge ousted in L.A. busing furor dies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former Superior Court Judge Alfred Gitelson, dubbed "the busing judge" after he ordered desegregation of the massive Los Angeles city school system, is dead. He was 69.

He was defeated for re-election after his controversial decision.

It was reported Monday that

ALFRED GITELSON

Gitelson died of a heart attack aboard a cruise ship off Panama Sunday night.

Ironically, his desegregation decision handed down in February, 1970, has never gone into effect, and his original order made no mention of busing.

He directed that no school in the nation's second largest school district could have a minority enrollment equal to more than 15 per cent above or below the minority population of the entire district.

The Los Angeles Board of Education appealed the ruling, saying it has no responsibility to eliminate de facto segregation based on housing patterns because the merits would not outweigh the expenses.

The District Court of Appeals reversed Gitelson's order last year, saying there was no evidence that the board "intentionally discriminated against minority students by practicing a deliberate policy of racial segregation."

On an appeal by the American Civil Liberties Union, the California Supreme Court agreed to consider the matter. That decision is pending.

It was generally agreed that considerable busing would have been needed to implement the order, and antibusing forces rallied to defeat him for reelection the following November.

Following the election, Gitelson said, "It turned into a busing referendum. There are enough people who are truly racists because that is the only way they could oppose not being willing to grant children the same equal educational opportunity."

In an interview following his ruling Gitelson explained, "From both the law and the evidence, I'm convinced that separate is inherently unequal. School boards owe the highest of good faith to their children."

Fran Savitch, Gitelson's daughter and an aide to Mayor Tom Bradley, said her father died while on a cruise with his wife Gail.

Gitelson returned to private law practice after his election defeat. He had practiced privately for 30 years prior to his appointment by the late Gov. Goodwin Knight, a former law partner.

Pomona officer's 'extra duty' hailed

Pomona Police Officer Walter Barkley has been presented with an award from Al Smith, division manager for General Telephone Co., for Barkley's recent capture of three suspects in an alleged attempt to remove parts from an employe's auto parked near the telephone company office.

The decorative award, inscribed with the policeman's name, was in appreciation for Barkley's action taken while he was off duty the evening of Dec. 11, Smith said.

Investigation indicated that an attempt had been made to remove the ignition system from a van owned by Albert R. Hilt, 18, of Alta Loma. Hilt had left his vehicle parked on a municipal lot at Third and Locust streets while he was at work.

Barkley held the three suspects until the arrival of on-duty policement. They were booked on suspicion of burglary and attempted auto theft.

Two face appearances in Pomona Municipal Court after having been released on writs while the third, a 17-year-old youth, will be handled by juvenile authorities.

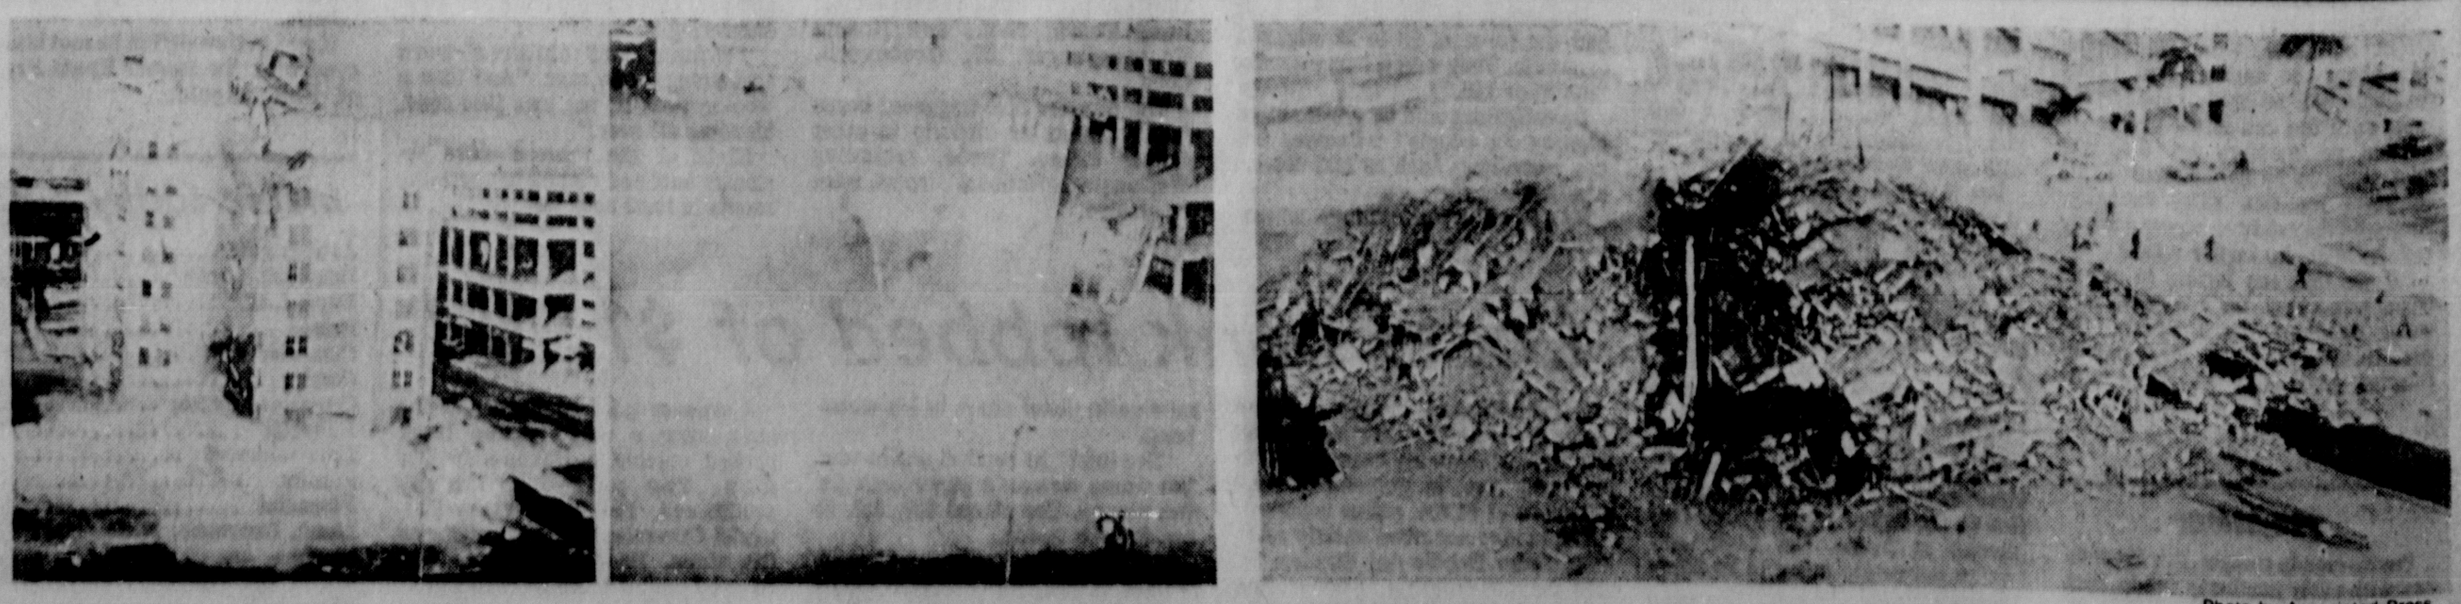
Poly coed engineer to ride float

Sandra Ferraro, civil engineering student at Cal Poly Pomona, will ride the float sponsored by the American Society of Civil Engineers at the Tournament of Roses Parade in Pasadena on New Year's Day.

ASCE, the largest and oldest engineering organization in the United States, is entering its first float in the parade. This is also the first float to be entered in the parade by a professional organization.

Miss Ferraro was selected to ride in the parade because of her outstanding achievements and personal qualities. She is majoring in environmental water resources engineering at Cal Poly and works as a civil engineering intern in the engineering department of the City of Chino. She is a member of the ASCE Cal Poly Student Chapter.

Miss Ferraro is a native of Fontana and attended Fontana High School and Chaffey College.



THAR, SHE BLOWS

Demolition was swift and furious Sunday morning for the Seaboard medical building in Miami, Fla. Photos capture the disintegration of the building. With 100 pounds of explosives, the structure collapsed within seconds. When the cloud of smoke finally blew away, all that remained was a pile of rubble. The building was constructed as the Venetian Hotel in 1925. The lot will be cleared and landscaped.

U.S., Soviet in fierce race to develop it

Who'll be first with laser 'death ray'?

LONDON (AP) — Development of a laser "death ray" as a military weapon is fast approaching with the United States and Soviet Union in a fierce race to be first with the killer beams, according to the authoritative reference book "Jane's Weapon Systems."

Editor Ronald Pretty, in his foreword to the 1976 edition that will be released Monday, wrote of American advances in high-power laser technology and use of the concentrated light beams in guiding explosive missiles.

He interprets a possible softening in the Kremlin position at the Strategic Arms Limitations Talks as pointing to Soviet self-confidence that might derive from having a new and secret weapon.

"Beneath the guarded references to high-energy laser research and development in American Department of Defense publications, and behind the virtual Soviet silence on the subject, it is probable that these two powers are locked in a costly 'superascientific' struggle," Pretty states in the foreword.

The goal, it continues, is to be the first with a practical laser weapon "capable of destroying a military target ... solely by means of the energy the laser is able to generate and transmit to the target — in fact, the 'death ray' so beloved of generations of fiction writers."

Lasers electronically amplify and coordinate light waves, producing straight, concentrated beams that can be extremely powerful. Recent applications include delicate eye surgery, "smart bombs" and reproducing news photographs.

Laser beams can burn through bricks and melt holes in metal, but their use has been limited by the size of equipment and huge amounts of energy required.

Jane's quotes Malcolm Currie, U.S. director of defense research and engineering, as saying the Soviet Union has spent large amounts of money on high-energy lasers and that the two superpowers are running about even.

It said Curie believes America might have the edge in such areas as structures, materials and fabrication techniques.

The first military use of destructive laser beams would more likely be in space than on the battlefield, according to Jane's, because more energy can be transferred when the beam is travelling through empty space.

Such applications could include disabling an opponent's satellites and intercepting and destroying incoming missiles.

Pretty writes that a variety of U.S. laser-guided missiles "may be presumed to have their counterparts in the U.S.S.R."

He declares that in the first round of arms limitations talks the Soviets rejected a proposed balance based on an equal number of launch vehicles but accepted it in the second round, and adds:

"The inference that Russia has agreed to this because it feels confident of a compensating superiority in other than numerical terms seems a reasonable one."

Murder motivated by greed, say police in slaying of 4

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Police have sketched a portrait of murder motivated by greed in charging furniture store owner W.T. Zeigler Jr. in the Christmas Eve slayings of his wife, her mother and father and a customer.

Zeigler, 35, was arrested in his hospital bed Monday night and charged with four counts of first-degree murder in the multiple shooting deaths at his store in Winter Garden, a small town about 10 miles east of Orlando.

Killed in a volley of shots from as many as five pistols were Ziegler's wife, Eunice, 32; her parents, Perry Edwards, 72, and Virginia Edwards, 52, visiting from Moultrie, Ga.; and Charles Mays, 35, a customer.

Questioned about a possible motive, Orange County Sheriff Melvin Colman said detectives had discovered "two insurance policies taken out on Mrs. Zeigler's life in the last 60 days totaling $520,000."

Colman said Mays, a longtime customer of Zeigler's, was "lured to the store to be killed" as part of an alleged plot by Zeigler.

"It was set up to look like robbery," Colman said.

Colman declined comment on whether the deaths of Mrs. Zeigler's parents were part of the alleged plot, but it was speculated that they may have entered the store by chance.

The sheriff also declined comment on whether detectives believe Zeigler shot himself as part of his alleged robbery story.

Zeigler was charged, Colman said, based on statements by two mystery witnesses and a "preponderance of physical evidence."

"It's safe to say the evidence we have supports the charge," said Colman in declining to elaborate on the sequence of events before and during the shootings.

Colman refused to identify the witnesses or detail how they knew of the shootings.

Following his arrest, Zeigler was transferred from West Orange Memorial Hospital, where he was recovering from a bullet wound in the side, to a police holding section at Florida Hospital.

Asst. State Atty. Lawson Lamar said Zeigler would be arraigned as soon as his attorney agreed he was physically able.

Zeigler has remained silent about the shootings despite repeated police efforts to question him ever since he first reported them to Winter Garden Police Chief Donald Ficke, a personal friend, in a telephone call to a party Ficke was attending Christmas Eve.

"Don! I've been shot! Please come help me," Ficke quoted Zeigler as saying.

Ficke and another officer rushed to the store where they found the wounded Zeigler and the bodies of the other four.

At the time, Ficke said Zeigler had gone to the store with his wife and in-laws to pick up presents for the party, which they also planned to attend, and to deliver a last-minute gift to Mays.

MAY LOSE ONE ANOTHER

Six-year-old Natasha Conley sits with her benefactor, Willie Mae Brown, who had a deformity in Natasha's face corrected through surgery. Ms. Brown had hoped to adopt the child, but the child's aunt has claimed custody.

Two new lives: an ex-con and a child

MIAMI (AP) — An ex-convict who befriended a deformed 6-year-old and then persuaded a team of doctors to restructure the girl's face says she'll fight to obtain custody of the child.

"I know that it's going to be hard for a single woman who's also an ex-convict to get custody of anybody, but I talked to my parole officer and he said he would support me in any way that he can," Willie Mae Brown said Monday.

Miss Brown said she met young Natasha Conley last October when the child was visiting her mother, jailed on drug charges. Miss Brown, released from prison last June after serving three and a half years for manslaughter, was working as a counselor at the jail.

"Her mother introduced me to her three other children, but not to Natasha," Miss Brown said.

Natasha was born with hypertelorism, a facial deformity that spaced her eyes about twice the normal distance apart. Doctors said the condition might have developed during the first three months of pregnancy when the mother was taking drugs.

"I've been going to school as a psychology major and I realize that to a child, this sort of thing causes mental damage," said Miss Brown. "If something can be done, it should be done. It's kind of hard to be so young and so rejected," she said.

She received the mother's permission to try and help the girl, whose father also was in jail and who was staying with an aunt.

Miss Brown, who underwent plastic surgery while in prison to correct facial damage sustained in a beating by the man she killed, was rebuffed by social agencies when she sought help for the girl. Finally, a team of doctors at the University of Miami's Mailman Center for Child Development agreed to operate free of charge.

Last month, the doctors removed two of Natasha's ribs, which will grow back since she is so young, and used them to rebuild her nose and hold other bones in place. Her brain had to be exposed during the operation, but by the end of the procedure, her face was reformed.

She returned to Miss Brown's home where she began to seek friends. But, after news accounts of the case, Natasha's aunt demanded that the child be returned to her custody.

Economic growth leveling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government reported today its index of leading economic indicators edged upward in November, offsetting a decline in October and providing evidence that the current leveling off in economic growth will continue for the next few months.

The Commerce Department said the November increase, the first rise in three months, amounted to four-tenths of one per cent, matching a four-tenths of one percent decline in October. The index had slipped one-tenth of a per cent in September.

Taken together, the most recent signals from the index present the profile of an economy which is virtually flat now that an initial burst of growth following the recession has tapered off.

The index of future economic activity began climbing in March, two months before the apparent actual recovery in the economy, and recorded a 12.7 per cent advance through August. But over the last three months, the index has moved up only one-tenth of a per cent.

The index, which is composed of a dozen individual economic statistics selected for their ability to foreshadow economic activity, is now 5.6 per cent ahead of where it was a year ago.

Commerce said the primary factory pushing the over-all index up in November was a 1.9 per cent jump in its measure of new business formation.

But even that category has changed little over the last few months. The measure of new business formation has slipped in two of the last five months, and remains only two-tenths of a per cent ahead of where it was in July.

INJURED HELPED

Pomona firemen assist two youths from a station wagon after the vehicle ran off the San Bernardino Freeway near San Antonio Avenue in Pomona and struck a Eucalyptus tree at the bottom of an embankment. Randy Cannon, 17, of Gardena, the driver, and Gregory Richardson, 16, of Hawthorne, were treated at Pomona Valley Community Hospital and released. The driver was going west on the freeway about 55 miles per hour when he became dizzy.

This doctor to call it quits

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When Dr. Paul Muchnic quits private practice this New Year's Day, it will be due largely to a nearly 500 per cent increase in his medical malpractice insurance. But not entirely, he says.

Muchnic, 35, is an orthopedic surgeon with a practice in the Fairfax District, a practice that enables him to take home about $65,000 a year.

The malpractice issue, and the massive insurance increase — which for many California physicians goes from $6,500 a year to $36,000 Jan. 1 — finally pushed him to deciding to quit private practice, he said.

"I saw the paranoia about malpractice suits evolving in med school, where we were taught defensive medicine," he said, adding that at the time he believed malpractice "was something that was done by poorly trained, old, bad doctors doing things they shouldn't be doing."

"But a lot of things we are seeing as malpractice have nothing to do with malpractice," he said. "We're seeing it with wound infections, with patients who just aren't happy with their results, patients who simply don't want to pay their bills."

Despite the malpractice problem, said Muchnic, who has never been sued, other things about private practice have bothered him to the extent he was considering quitting private practice.

Robbery at '74 shooting scene

Plaza Liquors at 1785 N. Garey Ave., Pomona, scene of a robbery Oct. 11, 1974, in which two men were shot to death, was robbed Monday evening.

Store clerk Robert D. Bridges, 23, said three men entered, one showed a pistol and he and a second man jumped the counter. Bridges was forced to lie on the floor while one man used the victim's belt to bind his hands. Then the cash register was looted.

A witness said she saw the three men run to a car parked in an alley at the rear of the store and drive south in Park Avenue. Two highway patrolmen, parked at a doughnut shop nearby, noticed the suspect car and told police it appeared to have been an old police detective sedan. They were unaware that the robbery had been committed.

The gunman was described as a Negro about 25, 6 feet tall wearing a black leather jacket, maroon beanie and dark trousers. He was armed with a .22-caliber revolver.

A 49-year-old Riverside woman was robbed of her money, jewelry and glasses valued at $1,880 by a man who surprised her as she opened up a business at 108 W. C St. in ONTARIO Monday.

Mrs. Doris Huntington told police that as she unlocked the door of Chilson Management Control Co. where she works, a man suddenly appeared and forced her through the door. She said the man, dressed in dark clothing, ordered her to give him all the money she had. She said she gave the man some cash and then he forcibly removed her rings and a watch from her fingers and wrist.

She said the man grabbed her glasses and ran out the door.

The robber was described as a Caucasian about 5 feet 8.

Arsonists nearly succeeded in burning down a vacant house in POMONA Monday night.

Pomona Fire Chief John M. Fowlkes said all rooms or the house at 2160 N. San Antonio Ave. were heavily damaged. Loss estimate was set at $10,000.

A passing motorist saw the fire and stopped to call the fire department. It was 11:12 p.m. Fowlkes said a juvenile was seen running from the property as the firemen arrived.

The fire was incendiary, he said, and is under investigation.

Two ONTARIO men accused of killing an Ontario drug abuse counselor have been ordered to stand trial on murder charges in West Valley Superior Court.

Following a week-long preliminary hearing in West Valley Municipal Court for Samuel W. Jones, 29, and Francis M. Anthony, 36, accused of killing Raymond Meras, 36, on Nov. 25, Judge David Merriam ordered the defendants to appear in Superior Court on Jan. 9 for arraignment and trial date setting. Bail for Jones was set at $150,000 with bail for Anthony set at $75,000.

During the preliminary hearing that concluded Friday a witness placed the defendants at Meras home on Nov. 25. Several witnesses testified about a gun seen in the possession of Jones prior to Meras' death.

Two CUCAMONGA youths walking home were robbed of their wallets by two other youths who fired several shots into the air to frighten them about 8:45 p.m. Monday behind a liquor store near Archibald Avenue and Foothill Boulevard, West End sheriff's deputies reported.

The youths, Edward Johns and Fred Trimbell, told deputies their assailants were about 17, one armed with a small caliber revolver.

The youthful robbers were both described as Caucasians, 17 to 19. They drove away from the area in a 1964 dark blue lowered Chevrolet with chrome side trim on the driver's side.

Deputies said the stolen wallets contained a small amount of cash.

State of Union: Ford's goals, visions '76-'80

VAIL, Colo. (AP) — President Ford's January 19 State of the Union message will be a "philosophical" overview "of the goals and visions of where the President wants to lead the country over the next several years," the White House says.

Press Secretary Ron Nessen indicated Monday that Ford, confident of election to a full four-year term next November, will give a speech that outlines national plans for at least five years and beyond.

"It will be more philosophical," Nessen said, adding that Ford will offer specific goals in individual legislative proposals.

Nessen said the President will deliver his tax message to Congress on Jan. 20, a day after the State of the Union address.

The fiscal 1977 budget is nearly completed, but Nessen said Ford still has "a couple of decisions to make."

Give up on 372 lost in India mine blast

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A top Indian mines official ruled out today any chance of survival by even a few of the 372 miners trapped by millions of gallons of water in a flooded coal mine shaft in northeast India.

Srinivasa Chari, secretary of coal in the energy ministry, said the high-capacity pumps and technicians being rushed from the United States will be used only to remove the water and enable rescue workers to remove the bodies.

"There's no point in talking about survivors," Chari told a news conference after his return from the disaster site as Chasnala, in India's coal country 160 miles northwest of Calcutta.

Since the explosion ripped through the mine Saturday and set off flooding from an abandoned shaft 80 feet away, the government had held out hope that a few miners might be clinging to life in airpockets in the 1,200-foot-deep shaft.

"There are no such pockets," Chari said.

The Soviet Union, France and Poland joined the United States in offering pumps and technicians to help drain the mine of an estimated 110 million gallons of water, but the Indian government said it was waiting to see how fast it can mobilize equipment from the United States before accepting other offers.

Robert Barrett, head of the U.S. Mining Enforcement and Safety Administration, said in Washington that 10 pumps, each with a capacity of 2,500 gallons per minute, were being flown to India from Midland, Tex. He said three experts from his agency and a fourth from a mine rescue firm would accompany the equipment.

It was understood here that two pumps from the United States would be at the site by Thursday.

Five pumps already working at the site have a capacity of less than 1,000 gallons a minute. Chari said even with the addition of two of the high-capacity pumps the draining could take 15 days.

Ford commended for improving press relations

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford is to be commended for improving White House relations with the press, but his chief spokesman gave a "disastrous nonperformance" on the recent China trip, the National Press Club says.

A study committee of the club said Monday that Ford should be credited with "much of the improvement in the atmosphere" at the Executive Mansion, noting he had held 23 news conferences and more than 50 interviews through the end of Novemember.

Former President Richard M. Nixon held only 37 news conferences during his 5½ years in office.

However, the panel also found that Ford "has not always operated with the 'openness and candor' which he promised the American people the day he took office" and recommended that Ford issue an order to insure openness from top aides.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen took blasts from the committee, especially for his handling of foreign policy.

The committee said Nessen "lunged to his nadir on the recent China trip by what many White House reporters believe was the most inept performance in modern times in handling the press relations on a president's mission overseas."

"It is difficult to see how Nessen can be the presidential spokesman abroad unless he finds some way to improve on this kind of disastrous nonperformance," the report said.

Nessen's problem in foreign affairs is antagonized "because of the penchant for secrecy by Secretary of State (Henry A.) Kissinger," which makes it difficult for Nessen to get good information on foreign issues, the panel said.

The study was conducted by a panel headed by John W. Kole of The Milwaukee Journal. Members included Aldo Beckman, Chicago Tribune; Clifford Evans, RKO General General Broadcasting; William Shannon, New York Times; Daniel Moskowitz, McGraw-Hill publications; and James McCartney, Knight newspapers.

Joyce Brothers

Who handles money?

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: My husband and I are constantly arguing about who should handle the money in our family. This has become more and more of a problem because of rising prices, less income and the dollars and cents pressures we've been facing. When we get uptight about money, it starts other quarrels because my husband puts women down every time he opens his mouth about women's "inability to understand facts and figures." Because he thinks all women are such nitwits, naturally he thinks he should have total control of the budget. Yet, he doesn't have a clue as to what household items cost these days. He expects me to be able to live on the same food budget as I was living on ten years ago. This is ridiculous, as everyone who's been to a market knows! — S.O.

Dear S.O.: Take your husband by the hand and lead him to a market. Let him do the shopping every other week and you take over one of his tasks such as mowing the lawn, sweeping out the cellar or doing some simple repair job, which you can learn from a book. Many women have been frightened by the belief that even the smallest repair job is beyond them but this obviously isn't true.

Wisdom and ability to handle money has nothing whatsoever to do with sex. Sometimes the man is better in money matters, and sometimes the woman of the house is superior. The important thing is to find out which of you has more talent in this direction, and then utilize that talent.

Money differences between a husband and wife may result from childhood impressions or reflect opposing goals for the family or signal a lack of discipline. Little can be accomplished to overcome your difficulties until you both recognize that there is a problem and that money and economic problems are adding needless tension to your lives. Obviously, communication is essential if you are to settle this difficulty. A lack of communication generates tension and will defeat you before you begin.

Select a good time to try a new discussion about finances. Don't attempt it on an empty stomach or when you're both exhausted, but wait until you're rested and have had a pleasant meal without too many cocktails before. Then begin by trying to separate and divide responsibilities. Keep an open mind and be willing to experiment on a week-to-week or month-to-month basis. Your husband could manage the car, house and work-related expenses and you could control spending for food, household operations and most of the clothing.

All spending decisions should reflect team effort and you should be able to draw up a general realistic, over-all budget that would include something for recreation and vacations. Set these goals together and then stick to them, but before you set them, make sure that your husband has some first-hand experience in food-shopping.

Developing a spending plan is one of the most useful ways to overcome the tension and hostility generated by the subject of money. I personally feel that it's very important to write down the budget because then there can be no misunderstandings and it should be posted in some prominent place, in case it's needed to refresh someone's rusty memory.

Studies show that money is the number one cause of worry in the United States. Trying to reconcile what we earn with what we spend is what causes the wrinkle in the brow and a great many people never learn to live within their budget. A nationwide survey indicates that married couples argue more frequently and more bitterly over money than anything else. Somewhat surprisingly, it doesn't make any difference how much of that green stuff there is, either.

Coppola fighting a losing battle in magazine field

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) – Francis Ford Coppola cheerfully admits that City of San Francisco magazine is his Vietnam — "I can't see the light at the end of the tunnel."

Coppola, who made a fortune with a pair of films about organized crime, has poured nearly $1 million into making the weekly magazine a success. But his latest venture reportedly is losing $100,000 a month.

"I always spend lots of dough," says Warren Hinckle, the dapper editor with the eye patch who guided the iconoclastic magazine Ramparts during its heyday in the 1960s. He was tapped by Coppola three months ago as City's editor.

When money from the first "Godfather" film started coming in three years ago, Coppola became a financial angel to the struggling entertainment-oriented City magazine. Exasperated by the red ink, he took over completely last July.

"Look, if I'm going to blow a lot of money, let me at least have it the way I like it," he said at the time.

He hired Hinckle as a guest editor, who promptly sold out his first press run of 38,000 with a cover story purporting to explain why women have a tough time finding sex in San Francisco.

Hinckle then got the job permanently, but with a Coppola condition: "If I don't like the magazine, I'll just get another editor."

The magazine has defied local pundits' predictions that it would fold by Labor Day, or by Thanksgiving and, now, there are whispers it won't survive the new year.

Coppola doesn't talk about money anymore. Hinckle says only that "it is an expensive business. It's a tough job and a hard one to pull off. Coppola deserves a lot of credit for putting his money where his mouth is."

Hinckle says he is banking on the magazine being a true reflection of San Francisco: breezy, controversial, and "fabulously libertine." He eschews the slicker form adopted by "city" magazines elsewhere.

Virtually every issue has at least one article dealing with the city's large homosexual community and one on local politics. Hinckle thinks nothing of publishing an article sympathetic toward a particular person and, a couple of issues later, raking that same person over the coals.

"Look, this is a contradictory town, and I think the magazine should reflect that," he said. "The city magazines of the 1960s were thick and slick. That's outrageous journalism that won't fit here. San Francisco is not just a town, it is a state of mind."

Hinckle admits worrying very little about the critical issue of financing the magazine. He says it normally takes about seven years to put a magazine on a money-making basis.

The question is: will Coppola wait anywhere near that long?

A NEIGHBOR'S TRIBUTE

Rich, colorful tartans gleamed in the warm California sun Monday as the All-Canada Pipe Band, composed of a successful blending of businessmen and young lassies, went through a full-scale dress rehearsal at the Los Angeles County Fairgrounds. They were reinforced by two military bands. Adding to the color was the Canadian Mounted Police Musical Ride.

Bicentennial, Canadian style

...brass, drums, bagpipes, hoofbeats

The racetrack infield at the Los Angeles County Fairgrounds at Pomona resounded Monday to the blending of brass, drums and bagpipes and the melodic trot of horses drilling.

A few residents were on hand to admire the marching and playing of the All-Canada Pipe Band combining with the brass of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry and Quebec's famed "Vandoos," the 22nd Regiment.

The local people also gained another opportunity to see the split second timing of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police Musical Ride. The Musical Ride has been a popular attraction at recent Los Angeles County fairs.

The special units participating in Canada's salute to the U.S. Bicentennial chose the fairgrounds for a full-scale rehearsal for their half-time show Jan. 4 at the East-West Shrine Game at Stanford University.

The units comprising 300 marchers, will perform in the Rose Parade New Year's Day, then split for two separate engagements.

Twenty-eight horses of the Musical Ride, the 178 pipers and drummers, and 16 highland dancers will fly to San Francisco, while the remainder of the Musical Ride and the other units will perform at Disneyland Saturday and Sunday.

The core of the pipe band is the Winnipeg Massed Pipe Band which will be making its third trip to Pasadena.

The members of the band arrange their vacations so that they can make such trips to the warmer climes of California.

In contrast, of the Light Infantry and the "Vandoos" are military men on active duty.

They've served in such areas as Korea and the next duty will be Cyprus where they'll entertain the troops.

Montclair candidate

Citizen involvement stressed by Lopez

Citizen participation in the local government process is a key emphasis of Javier Lopez' campaign for the Montclair City Council.

"One of our strongest assets is people," said Lopez. "All the people need representation, not just certain segments. The people at large have been neglected by politicians and government in general.

"I feel that the people should have a voice. And the best way to have that would be to allow the people to be active members in the political development of Montclair."

Political apathy can be dealt with if local officials offer "something viable," he candidate added.

"The silent majority is silent because it feels useless and not a part of the government clique. Indifference seems to be rather esoteric. We must take steps to knock on doors and see what the people think and feel. If given the opportunity to take part, people will love it," Lopez commented.

Lopez, 33, has been a Montclair resident for 13 years and resides at 9209 Ramona Ave. with his wife and three children. He is currently a law student at the La Verne College Law Center and earned a bachelor degree in political science from Cal Poly in 1973.

He has been a volunteer for the Legal Aid Society of America and the Firehouse Community Center in Montclair, and served as college liaison for the political campaigns of Sen. Ruben Ayala, D-32nd Dist., and Congressman Jim Lloyd, D-35th Dist.

Lopez has also been a special voluntary teacher for the mentally gifted minor program at Moreno Elementary School in Montclair and was director of the Community Art Center in Pomona from 1971 to 1972.

Corona Expressway crash hurts 2

A mother and her daughter were injured Monday when their car ran off the Corona Expressway near Chino and struck two posts.

Carol Gordon, 34, of Elsinore, and her daughter, Monica, 12, were treated at Chino General Hospital and released.

Elephant seen before New Year's

Ontario Police Officer Ted Desormiers may be the brunt of elephant jokes the rest of the day, but this morning elephants were hardly a joke.

Desormiers said that about 7:20 a.m. the Ontario police dispatcher received a call from a man who said he was on his way to work in Alta Loma when he saw an elephant casually walking in a wash near Fourth Street and Hellman Avenue.

Desormiers was given the assignment to search for the elephant. Desormiers said when he arrived at the location there were no elephants in sight, but his persistence paid off. A short time later the officer saw a large number of circus wagons parked in a lot near Eighth Street and Hellman Avenue.

Talking to one of the persons on the lot Desormiers was introduced to the object of his search — a 21-year-old Indian cow elephant, was was called a "bad girl" by its owner.

Desormiers said the elephant had managed to slip her chain earlier in the morning and had taken a morning stroll down the wash near Hellman Avenue. The elephant was brought back to its trailer a short time later by the trainer.

Tot suffers skull fracture, mother hurt in traffic mishap

A 2½-month-old child suffered a skull fracture and internal injuries Monday evening in a head-on traffic collision which also seriously injured her mother.

The child, Illene Martinez of Temple City, and her mother, Mrs. Isabelle Martinez, 20, were taken to Baldwin Park Community Hospital and the infant later was transferred to Children's Hospital in Los Angeles. Her condition there today was termed fair. Mrs. Martinez, who suffered a broken pelvis and back and leg injuries, was reported in fair condition at the Baldwin Park hospital.

Sheriff's deputies said that Mrs. Martinez was driving westbound in Valley Boulevard at the San Gabriel River overcrossing when a car driven eastbound by Ida Lujon, 68, La Puente, crossed the center divider and slammed head-on into Mrs. Martinez' car. Mrs. Lujon suffered minor injuries and did not require medical attention. Deputies said the crash was still under investigation.

Claremont firm gets college job

The Claremont architectural firm of Tozier and Abbott has been selected by the Citrus College board of trustees to prepare plans for the development of the college's west campus parking site.

The contract, which is for $8,000 or eight per cent of construction cost, whichever is lower, will include designing, planting and supervising the construction of the parking lot plus landscaping the west side of the campus.

In other action, the board appointed Donald L. Madsen to the position of vice president and assistant superintendent for student personnel and institutional research.

$13,000 Yule tree fire

Residents of a Pomona home which suffered $13,500 damage in a fire Sunday evening said it started when their Christmas tree exploded and scattered flames over the living room.

Raul Eddie Lomeli, 2527 Aston St., said his wife plugged in the tree lights, which caused an explosion. The couple attempted to put out the fire with a garden hose but were driven outside by the fire.

Contents of the living room, hall and kitchen were destroyed and bedroom contents were heavily damaged by smoke.

Pomona Fire Department officials estimated the damage as $10,000 to the house, which included burned windows and eaves, and $3,500 to contents.

The fire involved the east side of the house and caused an additional $1,000 in damages to the home of Elma Rendon, 2519 Aston St., next to the Lomeli home.

San Dimas expands golf links panel

The San Dimas City Council agreed Monday to allow a representative from both the city's Women's Club and Men's Club to become ex-officio members of the Golf Course Advisory Committee.

The council unanimously directed City Manager Bob Poff to send a letter to both clubs requesting that either the president or a designated representative attend committee meetings on a regular basis.

The service club representatives would not be voting members of the committee, but would offer viewpoints on such matters as maintenance, quality of food and service to golfers.

Mayor Jim Lough and Councilman Keith Brogan reported that they had been approached by someone in the community who wanted the committee expanded so he could become a member.

Both men indicated they saw no need to increase the size of the voting membership on the three-man committee merely because someone wanted to join for possibly personal reasons.

San Dimas Canyon Golf Course is operated through a joint-powers agreement between the cities of La Verne and San Dimas. The committee is currently composed of Brogan as the council representative, Stanley Plummer as the joint-powers authority representative and Don Spafford as the citizen representative.

After the council adopted an ordinance prohibiting skateboards on wooden sidewalks in downtown San Dimas, the mayor emphasized the need for more stringent regulation of the ordinance governing horses in public places and thoroughfares.

Lough pointed out that some citizens have ignored the ordinance which forbids riding horses on sidewalks across Little League ballparks, and on the golf course.

Councilman James McLean commented that horses in unexpected places not only "infringe on others' rights, but are frightening to customers leaving stores who are suddenly faced with the sight of a horse."

Lough noted that most of the violators are not members of organized equestrian groups, and these groups want enforcement of the ordinance because violators give them negative publicity and false blame.

The council instructed Poff to contact the sheriff's Department and request more stringent citing of offenders and to post signs in the areas of concern stating that horse riding is prohibited.

In its final action, the council appointed Gary Cole to the Juvenile Justice Commission following an executive session to interview candidates.

Cole is president of the San Dimas Kiwanis Club and is employed at Plastron, Inc., a plastic manufacturing plant in Industry. He succeeds Dennis Douglas.

Job needs 'fresh look'

Van Dyke running for Chino mayor

Henry J. Van Dyke says he is running for mayor of Chino because the office needs a "fresh look," and he wants to participate in the growth of the community.

Van Dyke, a real estate broker, has announced his candidacy and filed nomination papers. He will be opposing incumbent Mayor Bob McLeod, and challengers Nick Medina and Robert Bertschinger in the March election.

The 58-year-old Van Dyke stated his decision to run was based on a desire to become "more active."

"Chino is a rather unique town. I'd like to help it grow into a healthy, responsive community," he said.

"While progress in developing a well-balanced community is a challenging and demanding task, I firmly believe there can be a reasonable consensus among the townspeople, and I would seek those opinions."

Van Dyke said he did not want to comment on the recent gang violence problem in Chino "without more information. I want to talk to the people in the barrio and see what can be done. Maybe there is a compromise to be worked out."

Van Dyke has lived in Chino for 38 years and attended school there. He owns Van Dyke Realty at 5452 Riverside Drive. He is past president and zone chairman of the Chino Lions Club and past president of the Chino Real Estate Board.

His wife, Esther, is president of the Chino Valley Women's Club.

Delivering a postal dilemma

Five years after Congress took the perennially deficit-ridden Post Office Department out of politics and set up the supposedly self-supporting independent U.S Postal Service, the nation's postal system is in worse shape than ever.

Indeed, the U.S. Postal Service is in "grave" financial condition, Postmaster General Benjamin F. Bailar has told Congress, and might have to make such major economy moves as eliminating Saturday deliveries and special delivery service. The cost of mailing a letter could go up to 23 cents in another five years, he warned.

The Postal Service has forecast a record deficit of $1.4 billion for this fiscal year, and that was before federal Judge John J. Sirica temporarily blocked its scheduled hike in the cost of a first-class stamp from 10 to 13 cents, among other rate increases.

All this will add fuel to the arguments of many who say that if the Postal Service can't deliver the mail and make a profit, then maybe we had better think about letting private enterprise have a try. Already, private package delivery services have taken more than half of the parcel post business away from the Postal Service. They are presently prohibited by law from handling first-class mail.

The major objection to letting private companies into the letter delivery field is that they would naturally focus on the more profitable, concentrated, urban routes. What about the millions of Americans living on scattered and inherently unprofitable rural routes?

Yet one of the economy measures the Postal Service is considering is the closing of a number of small, unprofitable post offices, and this prospect, more than anything else, has upset a lot of congressmen with rural constituencies.

It may be time that we accept the fact that the Postal Service simply cannot be expected to do everything and still be self-supporting, and that government subsidization will always be necessary. If such things as rural delivery and low library, book, magazine and newspaper rates are deemed to be necessary and valuable public services, the public should be willing to help support them out of general tax revenues.

Let the Postal Service concentrate on delivering the mail where private enterprise cannot do it profitably, but where private enterprise can do it more dependably, more efficiently and no more expensively, let it freely compete.

As the situation is now, either we devise some sort of public-private postal mixture or we face even greater Postal Service deficits and the need for even high government subsidies than at present, along with continued deterioration of postal services for everybody.

Ain't got no grammar

English teachers worry too much about grammar — about "how" a student says something rather than "what" he says — delegates to the recent annual convention of the National Council of Teachers of English in San Diego were told.

For instance, when a boy says, "I don't have no pencil," should an English teacher give him a lecture on double negatives? No, said council executive director Robert Hogan. The teacher should give him a pencil.

Then later, when he tells the local unemployment office, "I don't have no job," they will also hand him a pencil to list his qualifications.

"I don't have no pencil (or job)" is incorrect, of course. Many of the products of our high schools would say, "I ain't got no pencil (or job)."

Think on these things

December in many areas means winter has begun in earnest. Sudden change in the weather is expected and with it comes some really beautiful sights. Ice crystals caught in the grass are turned to prisms of light with the early morning sun turning them to amber and red and emerald green. Sunsets glow like embers behind the blue-gray hills of Oklahoma, and flocks of Canadian geese are still flying south, turning like silver flecks in the last rays.

The seasons here change dramatically and with the change a time to rest and a time to work. But there is never a day when there is not something beautiful to see, to experience, something to inspire. The universe is so great and I am so small.

The public forum

Police hamstrung

Dear Editor:

Our Pomona city administration hamstrings our police department to keep the tax rate the same despite the thousands of protest letters flooding the Progress Bulletin's public forum columns.

Pomona, wealthiest city of the valley, pleaded poverty and could not raise $3,000 to join all the other willing valley municipalities for a special task force on burglaries, with crime at an alarming rate in this valley.

Ironically, the council had over $3,000 to spend on legal fees to pursue a private feud of the mayor against the counsel for the police officers association. Too bad the election is long in coming. If we are not murdered by then, we will turn the rascals out.

State Sen. Bill Richardson discloses that the state prisons are now being emptied to the lowest level in history — to spare the state expense, they say — and dumping these hardened graduates into our communities most of which are ill equipped to handle this flood. There are no facilities for rehabilitation at all adequate in any respect. Our only defense is harassment by the police, constantly re-arresting criminals and keeping them under surveillance. The courts write articles saying they are powerless to do anything until the legislature changes the laws.

Meanwhile, we are robbed blind, commercially, on the streets, shopping centers, our very homes are invaded and vandalized and the legislature looks piously the other way reciting little piecemeal reform legislation, trying desperately to lull the voters into a false sense of security — Francis W. Swantz, Claremont

A time to reflect

Dear Editor:

On Dec. 24 I visited the Freedom Train at the fairgrounds. Sadly, it is an example of that which technology has deprived us of. The most apt description is my three-and-a-half year old daughter's exclamation, "Mommy, this is just like Disneyland."

Instead of being able to walk slowly and contemplatively through 200 years of history, we are hurriedly moved along by a moving sidewalk through a chain of poorly lit cars with lights and/or pictures flashing; mobile displays and taped words all going simultaneously.

Scattered amidst these displays are important historical documents and memorabilia which there is no time to even look at. The last car — conflict and resolution — with displays on Lincoln, John Kennedy, Martin Luther King and President Ford is the most disturbing.

The conflicts are still not understood and there has certainly been no resolution of the problem of subjugation of the human race by a few motivated by greed and power.

America's bicentennial should indeed be a testimony to the great ingenuity of this nation. It should also, however, be a time to reflect on the high ideals set forth by our country's founders and what we need to do to make "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" a reality for all men. — Aileen Forsheit, Claremont

Muddle in the bureaucracy

WASHINGTON — Under normal bureaucratic pressures, it takes a little time for a new agency to make a muddle of things. But the Federal Election Commission has succeeded in less than a year to botch its mission.

The commission was established last Spring to administer the campaign laws. The first priority of every worthy federal institution is to hire as many bureaucrats as possible at the highest salaries possible.

Although the new commission is confined to a modest $5 million budget, it managed to acquire 127 bureaucrats at an average salary of $17,463.

Then the bureaucrats, true to form, began to produce complex solutions for simple problems. Since bureaucrats are judged by the amount of paperwork they generate, the paper began to fly — with seven carbon copies of everything.

Ultimately, the busy bureaucrats designed a new disclosure form for political candidates to fill out. This was completed, unfortunately, before the commission adopted regulations setting forth what was to be disclosed.

The culmination of the bureaucratic process is publication in the Federal Register. This is the supreme moment when a new proposal or regulation is unveiled, as required by law, for public viewing.

The new disclosure reports, having been pushed into the bureaucratic mill ahead of the disclosure regulations, reached the Federal Register first. Accordingly, the forms were published, at a cost of $9,000 to the taxpayers, before it was settled what should be reported on the forms.

Or to state it simply, the commission put the cart before the horse. This was bound to cause some confusion, which the commission tried to allay with this footnote in the Federal Register: "Persons comparing the proposed regulations with these forms should not be disturbed by any evident discrepancies."

The House Administration Committee, nevertheless, was disturbed. Its staff found nine discrepancies between the proposed regulations and the new campaign law.

For instance, the law is supposed to prevent any large, hidden campaign spending. But one of the commission's proposed rules would permit a group of individuals, each staying below the $100 minimum, to join in a major expenditure without having to report it.

The House staff pointed this out in a confidential memo. "Thus," explained the memo, "a group of 1,000 individuals could contribute $100 each and spend $100,000 on a single transaction for 10 daily full-page political advertisements in a newspaper for the ten-day period immediately preceding an election, and NOBODY would have to report either the contributions or expenditures."

The disclosure rules and forms should have been ready months ago for the presidential candidates to file on January 31, 1976. But the fuddle factory, which was supposed to produce the new regulations, has been spinning its wheels. Short of a bureaucratic miracle, the candidates will have to use old, out-dated 1972 forms.

Footnote: A spokesman told our associate Bob Owens that the Federal Election Commission "would wait to respond to questions" at congressional hearings next month.

FORD'S TESTINESS: President Ford, an admirer of the late Harry Truman, can be just as testy. Confidential White House minutes show frequent Trumanesque utterances coming from the President.

For example, Ford chafed the other day over the trouble he has had getting the bureaucracy to economize. Every time he orders a spending cut, the bureaucrats invariably slash the wrong programs.

"The moment you tell 'em to cut something," grumped the President, "they all go to the most sensitive programs to make it tougher for us."

Nevertheless he stubbornly resisted heavy defense cuts. "I don't approve of overly severe cuts," he snorted tersely.

An associate told him that his top Pentagon people hadn't been fighting on Capitol Hill for military appropriations. Snapped the President: "That's inexcusable!"

Another time, the confidential minutes show Ford was discussing the de-regulation of natural gas prices. The measure was being held up before the congressional recess by House Commerce Chairman Harley Staggers, D-W. Va.

Bellyached the President: "Why should this country let one man hold up means to provide the necessary natural gas?" He threatened to seek a discharge petition to force the bill out of Staggers' committee.

The gentler stork

A generation ago, only rich people could afford to have their babies delivered in hospitals. Poor people had their babies at home. Now rich people are preferring to have their babies at home.

Recent studies show that mothers whose babies are delivered at home by midwives have fewer complications and healthier babies.

Also, mothers who were not anesthetized and not drugged reduced the risk to themselves and their babies. These studies were conducted in California and Chicago, in Appalachia and the Netherlands. All findings confirm the advantages of home delivery.

And another thing: Being born is a traumatic experience. From the dark of the safe, warm, comfortable uterus the newborn is suddenly propelled into the noise and glare of the delivery room, suspended by the feet, whacked across the bottom.

Little wonder he enters the world screaming in terror.

A French obstetrician, Dr. Frederick Leboyer, is creating a considerable stir in the medical profession there and here by practicing and advocating a return to what some scientists consider "primitive procedures."

Purposely, he shrouds the delivery room in semidarkness and requires that any necessary communication be in whispers. In the dim-lit stillness the baby emerges and immediately is placed gently on the mother. The natural hollow of her abdomen becomes a nest which moves gently with her breathing.

Any sounds which the baby hears are natural, familiar.

The baby is not spanked awake to start breathing. Dr. Leboyer says it is our hospital production-line impatience which instituted this shortcut.

Actually the baby, for the minutes following delivery, gets oxygen through the umbilical cord; it may be seen pulsating vigorously.

Breathing, this doctor believes, should come at the baby's own pace. Dark-film photographs of babies thus delivered shows them, face-down on the mother, beginning with small gasps to breathe, slowly stirring, reaching out first with the arms, then the legs. Comforted by the hands of his mother or doctor, the baby is gradually rolled on his back and begins to uncoil.

Then, instead of being dumped harshly onto a scale, he is gently dipped into lukewarm water. His eyes open. His expression is calm, tranquil.

Of course, Dr. Leboyer is not without professional critics, but parents of infants delivered by the gentler stork over the past seven years affirm that their children are unusually calm and well-balanced.

Just in jest

Rocks for pets? Why not? After all, what could provide more companionship for people with rocks in their head?

But seriously, it's things like that which sometimes get me to wondering if we Americans are as smart as we like to think we are. Frankly, if some of us had the brains that God gave rabbits, 11,000 U.S. citizens wouldn't have injured themselves this year falling off their high heels.

And instead of moaning and groaning about our traffic problems, maybe the thing we should do is to enact laws like they have in some of the so-called backward nations. In Nigeria, for instance, instead of handing out citations, traffic enforcement officers have been authorized to simply horsewhip errant motorists. Result? Fifty per cent fewer traffic violations!

Ray Cromley
Nuclear safety numbers game

The U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission recently came forth with a careful, detailed study mathematically calculating the chances of major nuclear accidents and the deaths and damage likely to be caused.

The work was carried out by a scientist of considerable repute, an honest, able, upright man.

The conclusions, nevertheless, are false and misleading. They are the result of a mathematical anomaly and are not privately taken at face value by senior scientists in the agency.

The study finds that the chance of any individual dying from an accident in a nuclear-powered utility plant in any one year is a miniscule one in five billion — assuming 100 nuclear plants — as contrasted with a one in 4,000 chance of dying in an automobile accident, a one in 10,000 chance of being killed in a fall, a one in 30,000 chance of drowning. The probability of 100 persons dying in a nuclear reactor accident — again assuming 100 operating nuclear utility plants — is calculated at one in 100,000 years, roughly the same probability as 100 persons being killed in a meteorite impact. In contrast with one chance in 16 years of 100 people dying in an explosion, or one in seven years of 100 dying in a fire.

This would seem to place nuclear accidents as one of the least of the worries we might face in the years ahead.

Though the mathematical procedures leading to this conclusion are precise, given the data, there is a catch. Because of the limited experience we have had thus far with nuclear power the probabilities which show up on the answer line may be so distorted as to be meaningless.

To oversimplify, it is as though one flipped a coin three times, then developed a theory on how many times heads would appear in 1,000 flips, based on those three trials, modified by logic and mathematical experience. If, by chance, heads appeared three times in a row, we could come up with some weird conclusion as to what would happen in 1,000 tries.

In blunt terms, we do not have sufficient evidence as yet to determine the probability of nuclear accidents or their probable seriousness.

Take a recent highly publicized accident in which a workman, routinely lighting a candle to check on something set a serious fire at one nuclear plant. Since this occurred before the completion of the safety study, it was considered in the mathematics. But as one nuclear scientist in the regulatory agency said wonderingly, no one in a thousand years would have thought of a candle starting a fire in a nuclear plant. If it hadn't happened, it would most certainly not have been figured in.

How many other unpredictable accidents and combinations of accidents are likely to occur in this uncharted field no one knows.

The problems will show when there are not a hundred, but a thousand plants, operated routinely by men who have come to regard nuclear power, not as a new and untried source, but as a ho hum, ordinary power source of no particular danger.

This is not to say we should slacken our drive for nuclear power. Opponents, notwithstanding, the evidence points to a most serious need. And though, as noted, the mathematics of this study do not prove it as safe as government propagandists claim, there is no evidence to date either to suggest seriously that nuclear power will be more dangerous than automobiles, swimming pools, airplanes or gas as a fuel, which we have come to accept in return for the benefits they offer.

She named baby after boss

Dear Ann: I thought your column was to read, not to write to, but now I've got a doozie!

I named our baby after my boss. I've been working for him for 12 years and think the world of the man. But honestly, Ann, there was never anything but friendship and respect between us.

My problem is two-fold: (1) People around the office kid him about the baby. Typical: "Well, how is your new son today?" (2) I've been told that his wife doesn't appreciate my naming the baby after him. (He is 59 and she is 51.)

I'd hate to give up my job over this but I can't continue working there if I don't find a solution. Can you help? — Rae

Dear R.: To quit would look like an admission of guilt. Stay put.

It's too late to change the baby's name, so laugh it off. Before long the jokes will wind down and things will be back to normal again.

Dear Ann Landers: You've probably told your readers a thousand times, but once more won't hurt. Please tell them again: "If you drink, don't drive. If you drive, don't drink."

A young man of 34 was killed two days ago. He was a wonderful guy, but on occasion he drank a little too much. He apparently fell asleep at the wheel of his car, rammed into a light post and was killed instantly. His passenger was critically injured.

This man had seven children — the youngest, three years old. His wife was so despondent she tried to commit suicide. She is in the hospital now, hovering between life and death.

I overheard one of the deceased's friends say, "I was with him that night. In fact, I was going to drive him home but he insisted he could manage O.K. I didn't want him to get mad at me."

How that man wishes he had risked his friend's wrath and taken his car keys away. Had he done so, seven children would not be mourning the death of their father — and maybe their mother as well. — Sad In Illinois

Dear Sad: Yes, I have said it time and time again, but it's worth repeating, especially since tomorrow night is New Year's Eve. "If you drink, don't drive. If you drive, don't drink." A boozed-up driver behind the wheel of a car is a potential suicide and/or a murderer.

Dear Ann Landers: The reader who informed you that there is no BULL in Boston was right. The animal is rightly called a Boston Terrier. I will also go so far as to tell you there is no Toy, no Screwtail and no Bulldog either.

The Boston Terrier is known as the "American Gentleman." If you don't want to take my word for it, check with the Boston Terrier's Club of America in Mendon, Maine, or the American Kennel Club in New York. These noble animals deserve to be properly identified. Thank you. — G.C.M., Jr. Pres., Boston Terrier Club of Louisiana

Dear President: If you think a dog is man's best friend, you should have seen how many friends these dogs have. At least 100 people wrote in behalf of their mislabeled pets. Thank you — one and all.

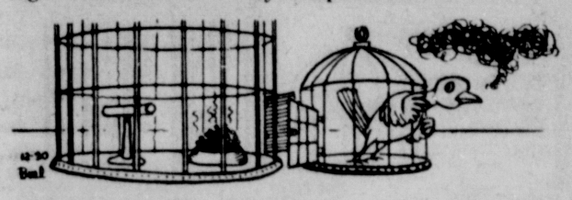
How to catch wary canary

DEAR DR. MILLER: How, in heaven's name, do you ever catch a canary? Golden Girl has a great, big beautiful new cage sitting there empty because I can't get her into it. We had a terribly trying time with her crashing about wildly in her little cage while I was trying to catch her. I never did, and I could have killed her trying. There must be a way. Help! — S.T.



DEAR S.T.: Give Golden Girl a choice. Chances are she'll try out the new cage on her own. Bring the new cage and the old together, with the doors facing each other and open (be sure she can't escape around the opening). Then, simply leave the cages that way. Stock the new cage beforehand with things she likes which are easily visible, preferably near the cage opening. Odds are excellent that, in time, Golden Girl will wander into the new cage on her own. In the unlikely event she doesn't, then catching her can be accomplished if you take everything out of the cage except one perch. Have an assistant at the light switch to douse it quickly when you're ready, then carefully position your hand with a light piece of toweling around it, just inside the cage door. Then, the second the light is switched out, pounce (gently) on the area where Golden Girl is perched. As you're gently scooping her into the light toweling, switch the light back on and proceed with a transfer from the old cage to the new.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Of what importance is a lump in the breast tissue of a six-year-old dog, Wiggles? — S.M.

DEAR S.M.: Wiggles' own doctor has to answer that question. A lump in mammary tissue may mean anything from an abscess to a cyst to hyperplasia to a tumor, benign or malignant. What is important is to routinely check mammary tissue so that any lump may be found early and taken care of early.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Is catnip an aphrodisiac? For a cat, I mean. — S.S.

DEAR S.S.: Catnip, the chemical cis-trans-nepectalactone, can stimulate body rolling and face rubbing (which is part of the courtship display of a sex-aroused queen). However, the chemical has this effect on neutered cats, too. It does not increase sexual activity in any hence catnip can't qualify as an aphrodisiac.

DEAR DR. MILLER: At our new duck blind, my partner and I have had a lot of shooting. Blackie, my Labrador, hasn't had much work to do. We're both lousy shots. Could all this shooting have any effect on Blackie's ears? He pays no attention while we're hunting, but when he's asleep now, outside sounds don't seem to wake him up. What do you think, is he getting deaf? — S.N.

DEAR S.N.: Shotgun blasts over a comparatively short period of time could definitely cause some degree of deafness. The amount of damage done would depend on many factors, including size of the shotgun blast and the distance between gun and dog.

As bedroom goes, so goes son

The first week after my son went away to college last summer, I used to walk in his room and visit it like a shrine.

Everything was intact, just as he left it. I fondled the sherbet glass with the petrified pudding under his bed . . . ran my fingers lovingly over his drum set that leaked oil on the carpet . . . and cried softly as I tiptoed around the mounds of dirty underwear that didn't fit him anymore.

I made plans to preserve the room as a living memorial where I could go in the heat of the day and be by myself and reflect on the past.

Then one day as I meditated, I noticed he had an entire wall with nothing on it, so I moved the pump organ from the hallway into his bedroom. Noting the light was pretty good in his room, I also discovered by moving out his drums and storing them I could put my sewing machine in the corner with a table for cutting.

As we were making the change, my husband observed there was an entire closet free, so why shouldn't he move his clothes into the closet. By discarding five years of Sports Illustrated my son had saved, we found room for the Christmas decorations and the carton of cancelled checks.

More and more of the family began to visit the "Temple." It became a haven for camping gear, pictures, that needed framing, storage for summer lawn furniture and newspapers awaiting recycling.

The shelf of tennis trophies gave way to a supply of bleach bottles to be used by the women of the church for a project, the chest was moved out of the room to create space for my bicycle exerciser, and the bed was stored to make way for a rocker and a TV set.

Naturally, the walls were too masculine for the room, so we painted them yellow and slipcovered the rocker in a bright pink orange.

Just before Christmas, there was a knock on the door. It was our son home for the holidays.

"Hey, long time, no see," said my husband. "Son of a gun. How long can you stay? Terrific. We've still got the old sofa bed in the den and you're welcome to it as long as you like."

This morning, my husband said, "How long is your relative going to stay?"

"MY relative!" I shrugged. "I thought he was YOURS!"

Dr. Lamb

On high blood pressure

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Is eliminating salt from one's diet the only way to keep from having high blood pressure?

Also, could you tell me why my body shoots off little red spots? I got two today. One day I had about 10 here and there over my body and also on my head. Are these caused from the veins or high blood pressure? I asked my doctor and he said that it was nothing. If they are nothing why do I get them?

DEAR READER — There is some evidence that high salt intake will increase the chances of having high blood pressure. High blood pressure is caused by many other things, including kidney disease and various hormone abnormalities.

Simple obesity appears to be a factor in many cases. You would be surprised how many people with elevated blood pressure have lower readings if they get rid of any fat, even a small amount, that they have on their body.

If you want more information on the factors that affect blood pressure you can send in 50 cents for The Health Letter, number 1-8, Blood Pressure, with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Just send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Those little red spots could be any number of things, and your doctor is probably right that they are not anything for you to be unduly worried about. They are not caused by high blood pressure. They may be dilated capillaries, the smallest blood vessels in your skin, or they can be related to "haves," an allergic reaction.

Your blood pressure goes up in many cases because of constriction of small arteries prior to the small capillaries that connect the arteries to the veins. If anything the constricted arteries should diminish the chances of red spots.

There are some people who have a special type of elevated pressure with flushing of the face, but the elevation is usually temporary.

Those little red spots could also be related to fragile, small blood vessels. Special tests would be needed to see if that is so. One of the many causes for increased fragility of blood vessels is vitamin C deficiency. You might increase your intake of vitamin C by eating more fresh fruit and see if that helps.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Please advise me what is actinic keratosis on the forehead and scalp? What causes it, and is it serious? What can be done to eliminate this condition?

DEAR READER — Actinic refers to rays of sunlight, and keratosis refers to those brown or grayish spots on your skin. In short the term means grey or brownish spots on the skin caused by exposure to sunlight. They are quite common.

Depending a lot on how many you have and what they look like on examination, they can be ignored or removed. The doctor can use chemicals to remove them from the surface of the skin, if he thinks they need to be removed. In some instances he may want to remove them surgically.

The best thing for you to do is limit your exposure to the sun. I note you are in Florida, so I'm sure you get plenty of sun. Try to use a hat and cover yourself enough to avoid sun exposure and you will have fewer of these.

Don't be frightened of them, but do let your doctor see you from time to time to examine them. If neglected some of these are believed to progress to skin cancer.

Leukemia is cancer of the blood-forming organs and is characterized by uncontrolled production of abnormal white blood cells. Leukemia may strike at any age, develops each year in about 19,000 Americans, and kills about 15,000, according to the National Institutes of Health.

More than 60 per cent of all women holding college degrees now work, compared with only 25 per cent of those who have only elementary school training, according to The Conference Board.

Cataract surgery is one of the most successful operations performed today. From 90 to 95 per cent of patients undergoing this operation regain useful vision, reports the National Institutes of Health.

In the ordinary good bridge game South would have no trouble making his diamond slam. West would start for the defense by leading two high hearts. South would run off a few trumps, enter dummy with the ace of clubs, lead and ruff a third heart and play out the rest of the clubs and trumps. On the last lead West would be squeezed and forced to unguard his king of spades to protect against dummy's eight of hearts. South would chuck that eight of hearts and make the last two tricks with dummy's ace and his queen of spades.

Now let's see what happens in the extraordinary very good bridge game.

West cashes one heart and stops to think. It is obvious that South started with just one heart. It is also obvious that his trumps will be solid so West shifts to a trump. South still uses that ace of clubs to get to dummy to lead a second heart and runs off all his club and diamond winners but the squeeze fails to operate. East hangs on to his jack of hearts and West to his king-jack of spades.

Ask the Jacobys

A reader from Pompano Beach wants to know how we play the three-spade overcall of an opening bid of one in a lower suit.

We play it just the same as an opening three-spade bid. Not much in high cards, but seven tricks if vulnerable and six if not vulnerable. Thus, we would overcall three spades with seven to the king-queen-jack, if not vulnerable. However, you don't have to play it that weak if you don't want to.

The bugging of bedrooms

How would you feel if you just found out your teenage children had wired your bedroom with an automatic listening device? Say you discovered it had been there for the last 90 days? And it had transmitted every whisper therein round the clock from your room to theirs? This is reported to be the sort of revelation that is astounding a number of parents now. A firm has been selling such bugs by mail for less than $15 each through magazine ads, investigators say. Research reveals that a whole lot of the buyers are youngsters hung up on the notion of eavesdropping on the old folks.

A. Certainly did. A year before he produced that masterpiece "Birth of a Nation" in 1914. Don't you recall his western entitled "The Battle of Elderbush Gulch"? Neither do I. Incidentally, Griffith likewise was the genius who first starred an heroic animal: "Rescued by Rover."

Mummers set mystery play

The Fontana Mummers will present "Veronica's Room," a mystery thriller, in the Fontana Mummers Community Playhouse, 16286 Foothill Blvd., at 8:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday and the three following weekends.

"Veronica's Room" was written by Ira Levin, author of "Rosemary's Baby." It will be directed by O.P. Hadlock, technical director of the Drama Department at Cal State San Bernardino. Janet Mathews is assistant director, and Sandee Wiseman stage manager.

Members of the cast are Linda Woolverton, Dennis Michaels, Sonya Urquhart and William G. Snead.

The Mummers production is an adult mystery, and parental caution is advised.

Tickets can be obtained at the Fontana Chamber of Commerce.

Radar unit on cop's bike

RENO, Nev. (AP) — There's an electronic genius in the Reno Police Deartment. He's motorcycle policeman Ken Tuffo, who figured out how to equip his motor bike with a radar unit.

Tuffo thinks it's the only radar-equipped police motorcycle in the country.

He says the device has doubled his ticket writing. He says some 250 motorists have "met" him since he turned the radar on.

Citrus to show 'Sting'

"The Sting," starring Paul Newman and Robert Redford, will be shown in the Citrus College Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. Jan. 11. Tickets are $1.50, general, 75 cents for students and senior citizens.

"The Sting" is one of a series of movies presented by the Associated Students and the Office of Community Services. Subsequent films will be "Dr. Strangelove" Feb. 26, "Harold and Maude," March 31, and "Little Big Man" April 22.

TOM SMEETH, Pomona College drama student, will direct the Valley Community Theater production of "Play It Again, Sam." The Woody Allen comedy opens at 8:30 p.m. Jan. 8. Smeeth has directed several one-act plays at Pomona and directed "Plaza Suite" at the Brookfield Academy Summer Theater Work-shop in Wisconsin.

Scripps plans music programs

Musical programs will be presented at Scripps College at 8:15 p.m. Jan. 9, 11 and 14.

On Jan. 9 tenor Nile P. Norton will offer two song recitals "Dichterliebe" by Schuman and Barber's "Hermit Songs at the Humanities Center. He is director of choral activities at Whittier College. He will be accompanied by pianist Robert MacSparran, music lecturer at Scripps.

Harpsichorist Preethi de Silva, assistant music professor at Scripps, will give a recital in Balch Auditorium Jan. 11. A native of Ceylon, Miss De Silva has performed throughout the world on radio, television and the concert stage. Her program will include works by Bach, Forqueray, Froberger and Blacher.

A student recital will be presented in Pattison Hall Jan. 14. Voice and piano students of Scripps faculty members Roger Ardrey, Shirley Close, Robert Grayson, Jessica Konopka, Jane O'Donnell, Natalie Tillotson and MacSparran will perform.

The three programs are open to the public without charge.

Reagan: a look at his track record

EDITOR'S NOTE: Former California Gov. Ronald Reagan cites his record in the state house in his campaign for the GOP presidential nomination. Here, in the first of a two-part series, is a look at some of his statements and accomplishments.

By DOUG WILLIS
Associated Press Writer

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The record of Ronald Reagan the governor supports some of the claims of Ronald Reagan the candidate, but it also shows that some of his campaign statements are exaggerated.

As governor of California, Reagan, now seeking the Republican presidential nomination, waged verbal war against taxes, but he raised every major state tax during his eight-year administration.

Reagan also doubled state spending while governor. But most of that extra money went to local government, easing property tax rates.

Reagan made "cut, squeeze and trim" his slogan in those years. In his campaign for the Republican nomination for president, Reagan now talks about doing the same thing at the federal level.

As governor, Reagan found that cutting and trimming were more difficult than anticipated.

His first directive ordered each state agency to cut its budget by 10 per cent.

The next month, Reagan asked state employes to work without pay on Lincoln's and Washington's birthdays to help the state cut expenses. About two per cent showed up Feb. 12, and the plan was abandoned before Washington's birthday.

Within another month, Reagan also abandoned the order for a 10 per cent cut in each state agency. He went before the legislature with a proposal for $1 billion-a-year increase in state sales, personal income and business taxes.

Comparing campaign speeches with actual accomplishments is difficult. The same statistics can be interpreted in many ways. Here is a look at some of Reagan's words and some of his actions.

"I inherited a government that had been a little brother to big brother in Washington for eight years," Reagan says in his campaign speeches.

"It was virtually insolvent — on the verge of bankruptcy, spending $1.5 million a day more than it was taking in ... I didn't know if I was elected governor or appointed receiver.

"Jan. 6, we turned over the reins of government to a new administration ... They were handed a $500 million surplus..."

Democratic Gov. Edmund G. "Pat" Brown, father of the current governor, left Reagan a $194 million carryover deficit and a $35 million cash balance. His operating budget for the next year — 1967-68 — had a projected deficit of $526 million.

When Reagan handed over the state government to Edmund Brown Jr. there was a $566 million surplus from funds built up in 1972 and 1973 and a 1974-75 operating budget deficit of $350 million.

Reagan the candidate also stresses that he limited increases in the size of the state payroll. He did — although not by as much as he claims.

In campaign speeches, Reagan says that when he took over in 1967, "the payroll had been increasing between 5,000 and 7,000 employes each year for those preceding eight years."

When he left office, he says, there was "a statewide payroll that was virtually the same size as when we found it eight years before, even though the workload increases were as much as 66 per cent."

When Pat Brown took office in January, 1959, the total civil service work force, including parttime and temporary workers, was 80,932.

Eight years later, the work force was 114,403 — an increase of 33,471 or just under 4,200 persons per year.

When Reagan left office, the work force was 129,044 — an increase of 14,641 or about 1,830 persons a year.

Another Reagan campaign statement is in the area of welfare.

The former governor says that in 1967, "We were the welfare capital of the world. Sixteen per cent of the nation's welfare recipients were in California and the caseload was increasing 40,000 a month ... We've reduced the welfare rolls by 400,000, increased the grants to the truly needy by 43 per cent ..."

Comparing the total number of welfare recipients now and eight years ago is impossible because of the shift of aged, blind and disabled recipients from federal to state jurisdiction. Some clues are available, however, in figures from the Department of Benefit Payments on the caseload for Aid to Families with Dependent Children.

In 1959, when Brown took office, the caseload was 254,966. Eight years later, the caseload was 752,199. By March, 1971, when Reagan unveiled his welfare reform program, it had risen to 1,663,564, six and a-half times what it was in 1959.

In July, 1974, the caseload was 1,311,915, a drop of 351,649 from its peak and almost equal to the 400,000 Reagan talks about in his speeches. By January 1975, when Reagan left office, the caseload had increased again slightly to 1,400,797.

A look at benefits shows that when Pat Brown took office, a mother with three children on an AFDC grant received $149 a month. In January 1967, the same family received $176 a month.

In September 1971, the grant was boosted to $261 a month — an increase of slightly more than the 43 per cent Reagan has cited. Further cost of living increases raised the grant to $311 by December 1974 and to $349 today.

For the general public, Reagan today talks of having "given back to the taxpayers $5.7 billion."

Some of the money came in the form of discounts on state income tax — although the basic rate was increased from 7 to 11 per cent for those in the top brackets. Most of the money given back was in the form of aid to local governments. That aid was used to cut annual property taxes by an average of $225 per home and to shift the tax burden from lower income homeowners to a more general base.

In other areas, Reagan's record as governor is not so conservative as his public statements. Nor does it support the challenge of liberal critics that he catered only to big business interests.

—He was generous to public education at all levels, despite his repeated criticisms of the University of California and his campaign promise to "clean up the mess at Berkeley."

—He reduced the inmate population in state prisons with a probation subsidy program that encouraged judges not to send nonviolent prisoners to state prison.

—He offered subsidies to local government to provide care for mental patients near their homes instead of sending them to state hospitals.

Looking back over the Reagan years in California, Jesse Unruh, a Democrat who fought hard against Reagan, summarized it this way:

"As a governor, I think he has been better than most Democrats would concede and not nearly as good as most Republicans and conservatives might like to think."

'Gorilla' robs eatery, but 'Tarzan on job'

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The robber who took $1,278 from a pizza stand here won't be hard to remember but he might be a little difficult to identify. He was wearing a gorilla mask as he jumped from behind a banana tree at the rear of the stand.

The bandit, dressed in black clothing and a trenchcoat, grunted at Michael R. Wisdom, the 17-year-old cook, early Monday, saying something police quoted as "Arrgggghhhh!" and then "Ugggggghhhhh!"

Then the gunman slugged Wisdom with the shotgun, barricaded him, a waitress and another employe in an attic and emptied the safe and cash register.

Police say they are sure they will get their gorilla.

"Don't worry about the gorilla," said officer Dyton Ruiz. "Tarzan is on the job."

NFL's Rozelle Rule declared illegal

Progress Bulletin
Sports
Pomona, California ■ Tuesday, December 30, 1975

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The National Football League's Rozelle Rule—the device by which the league binds a player to one team—was declared today by a federal judge to be in violation of federal antitrust laws in a decision that could severly affect the sport.

U.S. District Judge Earl R. Lawson permanently restrained the NFL and its 26 teams from enforcing the Rozelle Rule. But Lawson stayed the ruling pending an appeal from the NFL, an action which is certain to come.

The ruling, coming nearly six months after completion of a trial in a suit brought by former Baltimore tight end John Mackey and 14 other former and present players, strikes a severe blow to the NFL. In effect, the ruling says the league cannot restrict its players from selling their services to the highest bidder.

The Rozelle Rule says that a player may become a free agent by playing one year beyond his contract. However, if that player signs with another team, his old club must be compensated with by the new team with players or draft choices, or both.

It was this device which the NFL used to prohibit a free market system for players, and thus stop any team from buying up quality players in an attempt to win a championship. The league argued the Rozelle Rule was needed to maintain competitive balance, and said elimination of the rule could destroy professional football.

However, Larson ruled, "Elimination of the Rozelle Rule will not spell the end of the National Football League, or even cause a decrease in the number of franchises in the National Football League...

"If the effects of this decision prove to be too damaging to professonal football...Congress could possibly grant special treatment to the National Football League based on its claimed unique status."

The suit by Mackey, which was tried by the NFL players' union, was viewed as the primary test case to determine if the Rozelle Rule and other restrictions on player movement were legal.

This case only sought to determine the validity of the Rozelle Rule. Other NFL policies, such as the collegiate draft and standard player contract, are being contested in a federal suit in California brought by Joe Kapp. It is expected to go to trial early next year.

Ultimately, the issues are expected to reach the Supreme Court.

Larson said the Rozelle Rule was "unreasonable in that it is unlimited in duration. It is a perpetual restriction on a player, following him throughout his career. He is at no time truly free to negotiate for his services with any NFL club.

"The rule is unreasonable when viewed when in conjunction with the other anti-competitive practices of defendants: the draft; the standard player contract; the option; the tampering rule."

Thus, while Larson made no ruling on such things as the draft and the contract, he struck a blow at them and further attacks on these policies are expected.

Here are Larson's comments on what he called the other "anti-competitive practices" of the NFL:

—The college draft, in which a college player must negotiate only with the team drafting him: "If the player does not desire to deal with the defendant club which selected him, or if he is unwilling to accept the terms offered by it, he is effectively boycotted or blacklisted."

—Standard player contract, which ties a player to the team with which he signs: "While minor modifications or departures from the standard player contract are permitted by defendants, no modifications or departures are permitted that would open up a player's services to free competition between the clubs."

—Option clause, in which a player must play one year beyond his contract to become a limited free agent: "The option clause acts to discourage players from playing out the option and becoming free agents...During this option year, the player who has not signed a new contract faces possible informal discipline by disapproving coaches and owners. He also risks injury and a poor performance during the option year, facts which would substantially limit his opportunities to go elsewhere if and when he attained free agent status."

—Tampering, in which a club is forbidden to negotiate with other players unless they are free agents: "This prohibition runs to May 1 (of the option year), despite the fact that the clubs' regular season ends in the previous December...The player has thus an unnecessarily small amount of time in which to bargain with other clubs if and when he finally achieves free agent status."

The case, which Larson heard without a jury, went to trial last Feb. 3. Testimony was concluded July 19.

A parade of 49 witnesses, including a number of NFL players and officials, testified at the 55-day trial at which attorneys introduced 320 exhibits which included the earnings of some players.

For example, it was revealed that Alan Page, standout defensive tackle for the Minnesota Vikings, received $120,281 in total compensation last year, including playoff and bonus money.

The league released a general report on club operations to show that NFL teams averaged $256,000 in after-tax profits in 1974. The report said a record eight teams lost money.

The suit was filed May 23, 1972, against the NFL, Rozelle and the 26 club owners. It began as a class action on behalf of all players but was scaled down to the 15 plaintiffs. Page was among the 15 players, some of whom have since retired.

The main issue was the Rozelle Rule, known formally as the Option Compensation Clause. It was adopted by club owners in 1963 as part of the NFL constitution and bylaws.

Alta Loma seeks Chino crown

By MIKE BROSSART
PB Staff Writer

Alta Loma High made it and Chino missed it, each by a single point.

The Braves held off a charging team from North of Riverside for a 48-47 semifinal victory in the Chino basketball tournament Monday night, but the host Cowboys dropped a 56-55 decision to Mt. Carmel of San Diego in the other semifinal contest.

That means Alta Loma (10-1) will battle Mt. Carmel of San Diego (8-4) for the tourney championship tonight at 8, while Chino (3-6) and North (8-2) will vie for third place at 6:30.

Ganesha was scheduled to play Cerritos for the consolation title this afternoon at 3:30, with Escondido meeting Santa Ana for fourth place at 5.

The Giants dumped Upland, 92-63, Monday afternoon, defending champion Cerritos eliminated University, 73-67, Escondido beat Edgewood, 51-45, and Santa Ana nipped La Canada, 60-58.

"That was a fine team defensive effort," said Alta Loma coach Jeff McCall after his Braves edged North's Huskies. "I thought we did a good job holding (James) McCloud to 26 points."

It might not sound like that great an effort, holding a high school guard to 26 points. But McCloud, a genuine candidate for All-America honors, poured in 33 against Pomona Friday and 30 against Escondido the following night as the Huskies won both those games by better than 20 points.

And while the 6-foot-2 senior scored 22 in the first half Friday and 19 Saturday, the Braves held him to a mere 10 points through the first 16 minutes Monday as they established a 29-18 halftime lead.

In the second half it was a different story. It was not until Alta Loma forward Anthony Vasquez grabbed the rebound from a miss by McCloud with five seconds left that the Braves were able to wrap up the one-point victory.

One minute earlier, Vasquez had scored Alta Loma's final bucket for a 48-45 lead. But McCloud countered with a two-pointer with 40 seconds on the clock to make it 48-47.

McCloud then controlled the rebound from an Alta Loma foul shot and North called time out with 27 seconds left.

McCloud missed a jumper and teammate Richard Box grabbed the carom but he missed also. McCloud caught the tip from a jump ball but Alta Loma's Matt Roberts blocked his shot. McCloud gathered in the ball when it came down and tried a final shot, but it missed and Vasquez caught the rebound and sat on it.

As usual, the Braves spread the scoring around. Vasquez led the team with 12 points, Jeff Anderson and Jamie Eagle added nine apiece and Roberts and Center Rich Davis each contributed eight.

Anderson tied North's Ted Thompson for the rebounding lead with 13. McCloud grabbed 12 caroms and Davis had 11.

North shot 43 per cent (20 of 47) to Alta Loma's 35 percent (21 of 60), but the Braves led in rebounds, 39-36, and committed 10 turnovers to North's 15.

"That's the first time they've lost with McCloud," beamed McCall. North's other loss was to Eisenhower, but the classy senior did not play in that one.

Chino was not able to hold off a second-half rally by Mt. Carmel. The Cowboys led by three at halftime, 33-30, but the Sun Devils cut the margin to one after three quarters and won it on a short hot by Kevin Gilbert that gave them a 56-53 lead.

Chino's Jimmy Love scored a tipin to make it 56-55 with three seconds left, but Mt. Carmel had no trouble using up that amount of time.

The lead changed hands four times in the final quarter before Gilbert gave the Devils a 54-53 lead with a little jumper. Then with Mt. Carmel trying to stall away the final minute, he slipped to the basket unnoticed and took a pass to score the winning basket.

Rams really happy at home

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Perhaps no phrase has meant more to Los Angeles Ram football fans than "home field advantage."

Three times in the last seven years, the Rams have been forced to travel to bitter cold climates for playoff games. The Rams lost all three times, and the cold weather was a major factor.

But fate, along with a touchdown pass from Roger Staubach to Drew Pearson, have provided Los Angeles with its first big break in a playoff game: the Rams get to play for the National Football Conference championship at home next Sunday.

Until last Sunday it appeared that the Rams would be forced to spend another long, dreary day in Bloomington playing the ferocious Vikings of Minnesota.

It was there in 1969 that an 11-3 Ram team coached by George Allen was beaten 23-20. It was there in 1974, when the Rams were 11-4 and coached by Chuck Knox, that Los Angeles lost 14-10.

Earlier in 1967, Los Angeles was forced to play in the Green Bay Packers' home territory and the Packers won 28-7.

But the Cowboys gave the Rams a belated Christmas present with a stunning 17-14 upset of the Vikings, giving the Rams, with a 12-2 regular season record, the home field advantage.

While it doesn't necessarily mean that the Rams will play any better, it does remove the mental factor — the fear of having to play in the subfreezing weather of winter.

The Sunday forecast for Los Angeles is for temperatures in the 70s.

"It's more helpful to to have the home field advantage than not," said Knox Monday as he surveyed his good fortune. "But remember this: the home field advantage can't block or tackle. The last time we saw the Cowboys, they beat us by 11."

That game was played at Dallas. It was the season opener for both teams. And, some say, the Cowboys had a mental edge after suffering a 35-7 shellacking from Los Angeles during the preseason. The argument goes that the Rams were overconfident.

Los Angeles rates a six-point favorite for this, Knox' fifth playoff game. He is 2-2 thus far.

Los Angeles fans, who have filled the Memorial Coliseum only once in the last two years, were rabid for tickets Monday when they went on sale at the Ram ticket office.

"The sale was unrelenting," said a spokesman for the club. "We had to hire a policeman to police the thing."

More than 60,000 of the 91,038 seats were sold. If the game is a sellout, owner Carroll Rosenbloom said he would televise the game to Southern California, even though a federal law — which required him to do so in 1975 — expires on Dec. 31.

James Harris, the quarterback with the sore arm, will probably start for the Rams. Ron Jaworski, the reserve, played the entire game last Saturday when the Rams won 35-23 over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Maniago still haunts Kings

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Cesare Maniago's long standing hex over the Los Angeles Kings continues, aided by a Minnesota North Star Youngster who was the Kings' top amateur draft pick last spring.

As Minnesota edged the Kings 2-1 Monday night, goalie Maniago made 37 stops in pushing his home ice record over the Kings to 12 victories, one loss and two ties. It also brought Minnesota's and Maniago's December record on home ice to 7-0.

Maniago and the team shared a bad year in 1973, as the veteran goalie was slow in recovering from a knee operation.

Now Maniago says the knee is fine, and describes himself as "brimming with confidence in myself and in the team. Sure, they got 38 shots, but a lot of them were from bad angles."

Rookie Tim Young figured in both Minnesota goals, getting the winner near the end of the second period, after setting up Pierre Jarry for a first period score.

Rights to Young were traded to Minnesota by Los Angeles this year after Marcel Dionne joined the Kings from Detroit. That gave Los Angeles a crowd of respected centers. The untested rookie fell out of the Kings' plans.

"Sure you could say I tried harder (Monday night) because it was Los Angeles," Young said, "My contract was all set and I was ready to sign but (Kings' owner) Jack Kent Cooke said he wasn't going to come through with the money, and I asked to be traded."

Since returning from brief minor league seasoning at New Haven, where his defensive development was stressed, Young has three goals and 11 assists in 18 games with Minnesota.

He was assigned to shadow the high-scoring Dionne throughout the game Monday night. Dionne didn't get the Kings' goal, although he did set it up with a pass to Gene Carr.

"Coach Ted Harris told me to not let him (Dionne) skate in on the net with the puck," Young said. Most of Dionne's eight shots for the night came on power plays when Young wasn't on the ice.

The Stars will try to finish out December with a perfect home record in a game against Boston Wednesday night. Los Angeles stays on the road for games at Pittsburgh Wednesday night and Buffalo Thursday.

USC rally stuns Hawaii

HONOLULU (AP) — Southern California, led by Bob Trowbridge and Marv Safford, overcame a 20-point second half deficit to defeat Hawaii 68-63 Monday night and advance to the Rainbow Classic final against unbeaten Iowa.

The Hawkeyes squandered a 28-point lead before edging Arizona 82-80 on two free throws by Dan Frost after time ran out in the other semifinal game.

Hawaii led USC 51-31 early in the second half but the Trojans outscored the Rainbows 17-3 in the next eight minutes as reserve Fleve Porter put in seven points.

With 1:27 left, Trowbridge's jump shot game USC its first lead, 60-59, since early in the ballgame.

Safford then scored two baskets and a pair of free throws down the stretch, wrapping up USC's ninth victory in 10 games.

Schaus almost misses chance at Bruins

By BILL LANGLEY
PB Sports Editor

LOS ANGELES — Fred Schaus, the former Lakers' Coach, almost didn't get his wish at the Bruin Classic Monday night.

After his Purdue team beat St. Louis, 80-77, in the opening game of the tournament, Schaus said the Boilermakers were looking forward to playing UCLA in tonight's championship game.

For awhile, it looked like Purdue might play Santa Clara instead for the title.

Underdog Santa Clara, only 4-5 for the season, gave the mighty Bruins a mighty scare in Monday's nightcap before bowing, 52-48.

So Purdue will play UCLA at 9 o'clock tonight for the champibnship while Santa Clara and St. Louis try for third place honors.

It was UCLA's 88th consecutive win at Pauley Pavilion but it was certainly not among the most impressive as the Bruins were ragged and sluggish against Santa Clara's slow-down tactics.

The visiting Broncos certainly controlled the tempo of the game. Santa Clara would lull the Bruins to sleep then sneak under the basket for an easy score thanks to some crisp passing.

"They obviously thought that was the best was of beating us," said UCLA Coach Gene Bartow. "The slowdown shouldn't hurt us as much as it did tonight. We've got to learn to attack slow-down teams and to convert our opportunities."

Bartown, who was the target of much abuse after the Bruins lost their opener to Indiana, knew what he would face if UCLA lost to Santa Clara at home and he may stilll get because of the closeness of the game, added, "I expect a few nasty letters after this game but I quit reading them some time ago."

Santa Clara Coach Carroll Williams feels UCLA may have some trouble when the Bruins go back on the road.

"UCLA is not a great team yet," he said, "and they will have some problems on the road. I'd say their weak side defense is poor."

After a 27-27 halftime deadlock, Santa Clara stayed with UCLA the rest of the way until guard Andre McCarter sank a pair of free throws to give the Bruins a three-point lead with 41 seconds on the clock.

Santa Clara missed its shot and McCarter was fouled again. He iced the victory by making his first free throw.

Bartow used many combinations Monday night but only Marques Johnson responded with a top performance. The junior forward made 7-of-11 shots for 18 points and grabbed 12 rebounds.

Center Ralph Drollinger fouled out as did his back-up, Brett Vroman. Richard Washington had an off night in making only four of 11 shots and guard Brad Holland connected on only one of six.

Santa Clara was led by seven-foot center Korky Nelson, who also fouled out with 12 points, and Glen Hubbard with 10. However, the most outstanding Bronco was guard Eddie Chavez, who directed the offense.

In Monday's opener, Purdue made 26 of 37 free throws while St. Louis hit on only nine of 17 to more than make up the difference of St. Louis making seven more field goals.

St. Louis' Lewis McKinney, a 6-5 forward, was brilliant for the Billikens in sinking 14 of 23 shots from the floor for 34 points, one short of his career high and only four away from the Bruin Classic record.

Purdue was led by hot-shooting freshman guard Kyle Macy, who was the outstanding player in Indiana high school ball last winter. Macy scored 24 points in making eight of 11 shots to pace the Boilermakers.

After the close win, Schaus said, "We were motivated by wanting to play UCLA here in Pauley Pavilion where the Bruins have such a great record. We want a chance to play them here, that's all."

Playing Santa Clara for the title wouldn't have been the same.

Terrapins whip Florida in rain

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP)—A no-name team has put the old familiar name of Maryland back among the royalty of college football.

From the time Jim Tatum collected his ninth consecutive winning season in 1955 with a 73-15-14 log and one national championship until Coach Jerry Claiborne arrived on the scene four years ago, Maryland managed only three winning campaigns, the last in 1962.

The 17th-ranked Terrapins completed their resurgence Monday night with an impressive, near-perfect 13-0 whipping of favored Florida in the rainy Gator Bowl.

They had just enough offense, but essentially they did it with a swarming, relentless defense which apparently took personally some hints in the local media that they weren't a fitting opponent for No. 13 Florida . . . and rammed the insults down the Gators' throats.

"They said we couldn't win the big game. They said we couldn't beat a Southeastern team. Well, that fired us up and we did it," crowed linebacker Kevin Benson, whose first-period interception at the Florida 44-yard line set up Larry Dick's 19-yard touchdown pass to Kim Hoover.

Mike Sochko accounted for the other points with a conversion and field goals of 20 yards in the second period and 27 yards in the fourth quarter.

"I don't know how much the pre-game publicity inspired our players, but they wanted to convince people they belonged here — and I think they did it," said Claiborne, who notched his first bowl triumph in five tries as a head coach. "We have a good solid program and we convinced people we can win the big one.

"I don't know what the people in Washington will write about now that we beat a Southeastern Conference team."

Their first victory over an SEC team in 11 tries since 1955 enabled the Terrapins to conclude their best season in two decades with a 9-2-1 mark.

In practice sessions during Maryland's week in Florida, Claiborne had labeled his club a bunch of no-names.

"Steve Atkins kind of stood out tonight, but we still have no big star," Claiborne said. "But there's a lot of heart on this team. We knew we could play good defense and we had time to prepare for Florida's Wishbone. Our scheme was good against it and our players were super. The defense was great and the offense moved the ball when it had to.

"Atkins ran great, Tim Wilson ran good, the kicking game was solid and we had exceptional coverage on punts. But without a doubt the biggest factor was that we didn't turn the ball over to them a single time without a punt."

Atkins, a brusing 225-pound freshman tailback, barreled for 127 yards on 20 carries, all but nine yards coming in the second half.

"That was the big one! That was the big one!" the hard-running rookie hollared in the jubilant Maryland dressing quarters.

While Maryland's aggressive defense — Claiborne is among the last remaining proponents of the old wide-tackle-six with its six-man line — was keeping Florida pinned down in its own half of the field until the third period, the Gators turned the ball over via three interceptions and a fumble, and also committed several costly penalties.

"Mistakes of execution and concentration will almost always get you beat against a good opponent," said Gator Coach Doug Dickey, who suffered his sixth straight bowl setback. "Maryland has a fine team, very sound and well-balanced.

"We had turnovers and other errors early in the game which put our backs to the wall the remainder of the night. We played terrible, extremely poor. We tried to get too much done in trying to get ready and we didn't do anything right. Maryland played a perfect game and we have no excuse. The harder we tried, the worse we got."

After a lull in bowl play today, action picks up Wednesday with the Peach Bowl in Atlanta, pitting North Carolina State against West Virginia. That's the first of five games to be played within a span of 34 hours. Wednesday night, the Sugar Bowl in New Orleans pairs fourth-ranked Alabama against eight-ranked Penn State.

On New Year's Day, No. 12 Georgia goes up against No. 18 Arkansas in the Cotton Bowl in Dallas, then top-ranked Ohio State seeks to lock up the national championship in its rematch against 11th-ranked UCLA in the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif. Wrapping up the bowl boom Thursday night is the Orange Bowl in Miami with third-ranked Oklahoma facing fifth-ranked Michigan.

The big one, as far as the national title gles, is the Rose Bowl, where Ohio State will seek to duplicate its 41-20 regular-season triumph over UCLA. That would give the Buckeyes a lock on the national crown since second-ranked Texas A&M was beaten by Southern Cal in the Liberty Bowl.

Despite the big win in the regular season, Ohio State Coach Woody Hayes expects the Bruins to be rough. "They finished the season on the upswing," said Hayes, noting that UCLA won six of its last seven games. "We know they have an explosive offense and an improved defense."

If UCLA is explosive enough and improved enough to pull off the upset, then Oklahoma could move into the No. 1 ranking by beating Big Ten runnerup Michigan in the Orange Bowl.

If that's not enough incentive for the Sooners, consider that this will be their first appearance on national television after an enforced two-year absence because of NCAA probation.

What's more, consider that three Big Eight teams have already lost bowl games. "We don't want people saying all Big Eight teams in bowls got beat," says Oklahoma's defensive stalwart, Dewey Selmon. "It makes us want to win this game that much more."

Sun Devil coach John Marincovich, who served in the same capacity at Garey several years ago, was not optimistic about tonight's championship game with Alta Loma.

"Unfortunately I have seen Alta Loma play," he said, "and they'll blow us out unless we have a super effort. I'm not conceding, but we'll have to play very well."

In the consolation bracket, Ganesha's George Terry scored 35 points, high single game for this year's tournament, to lead the Giants past the Highlanders. Ganesha forward James Verdon added 19.

Caps name Max McNab

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Max McNab, preident of the Central Hockey League, has been named the new general manager of the National Hockey League's Washington Capitals, replacing Milt Schmidt who was forced to resign.

The Capitals would neither confirm nor deny the appointment of McNab but announced a news conference later in the day to make public the new general manager.

Schmidt announced his resignation as coach and general manager Monday night following the Capitals' 6-0 loss to the Montreal Canadians.

Bonita likes Rhode Island

Bonita High will be returning from its trek to Rhode Island with two wins, as the Bearcats completed a "sweep" of their eastern road trip Monday night with a 63-48 win over Bristol High.

Closer to home, both Walnut and Chaffey had things tough in tourney play. Walnut lost to Gladstone 60-48 and was eliminated from the Nogales Tourney, while Chaffey was edged by Jefferson 92-90 in Covina Tourney action.

Bearcat Steve Sly tallied 18 points and pulled down 13 rebounds to lead the winners in both departments. Forward Aaron Bitran added 17 to the Bearcat cause, while Steve Benoit scored 13 markers and recorded eight boards.

Guard Matt Murphy topped his Rhode Island school with 19.

Bonita, now 6-4 on the year, dominated the backboards throughout the game, outrebounding Bristol 47-18.

The Bearcats return home Friday morning from the east, and will be playing Claremont High Saturday night at 8 p.m. at Bonita in a final tuneup for both teams prior to the start of league play.

Walnut fell behind to an aggressive Gladstone team early and the Mustangs never got back into the contest. The loss drops the Mustang season ledger to 4-8.

Gladstone center Bill Cavanaugh did most of the damage, scoring 20 points. Walnut's Kelly Bowlin matched that total as the top Mustang point producer.

Walnut will now be out of action until the opening of the Hacienda League season on Jan. 7. The Mustangs open against Bonita.

Chaffey lost an incredible game to Jefferson High of Los Angeles, as the Tigers led 90-80 with less than two minutes left in the contest. Fouls hurt the Chaffey chances in the late going, as top scorers Mark McQuaid, John Mattke and Randy Johnston all fouled out during the late Jefferson surge.

McQuaid's loss really hurt the Tigers, as the senior had accounted for 39 points prior to his exit. Mattke added 25, and Johnston 11, but no other Tiger was in double figures.

Bill Bryant paced Jefferson with 30 points, but it was guard Wilbert Williams who had the hot hand in the late going, canning 16 of his game-total 24 points in that final quarter, all from long range.

Chaffey, now 3-3 on the year, will play San Gabriel today at 4:30 p.m. at Covina High in the third place semifinals. San Gabriel lost to Lynwood 62-56 Monday.

Covina Tourney finals are slated for Wednesday.

Damien soccer team upsets S. Torrance

Host Damien High's upset of pretourney favorite South Torrance highlighted a full day of soccer action in the Third Annual Damien Invitational Soccer Tournament Monday.

The Spartans surprised South Torrance 2-1 in a third round tilt in the championship bracket. Unfortunately for the hosts, Excelsior beat them 3-1 in an afternoon contest to drop Damien into today's third place finals.

That game for third place, slated for a 3 p.m. kickoff, will be an all-local affair, as the Spartans will be meeting Chaffey. Chaffey downed Palos Verdes 1-0 Monday morning but fell to San Gabriel 3-1 in the afternoon outing.

San Gabriel and Excelsor will meet for the tourney title at 5 p.m. All tourney games are at Damien High.

Lone local school to make it into today's consolation final game was Upland. The Scots have rebounded from a tourney-opening 2-1 loss to Dos Pueblos to whip three straight opponents and 1-0 win over the Claremont JV squad Monday placed the Highlanders into this morning's Consolation "C" Championship vs. El Monte. That game was played at 9 a.m.

All other area teams besides Damien, Chaffey and Upland were eliminated in Monday's action.

Marina belts Garey, 88-66

By PAUL CLICK
PB Correspondent

ORANGE — Marina's Rich Branning was named the Most Valuable Player of the Orange Tournament as he scored 43 points in leading his teammates to a lopsided 88-66 victory over Garey Monday night.

Branning set one tournament record by scoring 99 points in three games. His high of 43 points in the championship game tied the tournament record for a single game.

Along with Branning, his teammates shot 63 per cent in the first half, making 19 of 30 shots. They started the game blazing away from long range and continued for most of the game. Garey fell behind as it could find no defense to stop Marina's outside shooting.

"We played a fine ball game," said Marina coach Steve Popovitch. "Branning had a super performance for us and when I took him out of the game I didn't know he had that many points.

"We didn't expand our lead after it reached 19 points but we played offense the way we wanted as we created our own tempo. We stayed away from Garey's run-and-gun type of tempo. Defensively we did a good job and we handled Gareys press well. We only turned the ball over a couple of times."

Garey was off as the Vikings tried to get their style of play going but Marina kept them away from the hoop. Garey's Kent Jordan and Gary Carpenter kept throwing up shots at the hoop but many of them failed to go in. Carpenter took 17 shots in the first half and connected on only three of his jumpers.

Marina, a good passing club, raced to a 25-14 first-quarter lead and balooned it to 49-30 at halftime.

Garey's coach Mike Wells said, "We played a good team in Marina. We were outrebounded again and they hit many of their outside jumpers against us."

When Marina didn't hit outside it went inside and beat Garey on the boards as Branning slipped underneath the hoop several times for easy lay ups. Also Marina made a killing at the free throw line hitting 26 of 30 shots as Garey's rough defense kept them in foul trouble.

Garey shot a miserable 37 per cent but Marina's defense kept Garey away from their offense of going in low to either Carpenter or Lofton. Carpenter, Lofton and Jordan constantly had a Marina defender shadowing them.

"I was pleased with our offense," noted Wells. "But our defense needs a lot of work before we tackle the league. There were no outstanding individuals for us in the tournament as we worked together for our shots."

Carpenter and Loftin however were named to the all-tournament team even though Coach Wells thought that there were no superstars on the club.

Marina had two men named to the squad in Mike Buhler and Matt Cook, who hit the boards well for the Vikings.

Popovitch said, "Cook and Buhler did very well for us especially on the boards. Also Dan Boldt played a very good game. He did a good job throughout the tournament even though he wasn't named to the tournament squad."

Marina was led by Branning's 43 points followed by Boldt's 15 and Cook's 12 points.

Garey's top scorer was Loftin with 20 points. Most of them came on six to eight-foot jumpers over several defenders. Carpenter chipped in with 19 for Garey. He also pulled down 11 rebounds and Loftin had 13 caroms.

TOP FORM — Indiana's Scott May shoots over St. John's John Farmer to score in Hoosiers' 76-69 victory.

Top-ranked Indiana celebrates holiday

By The Associated Press

Top-ranked Indiana had some trouble swallowing its last bite of the Big Apple, but finally managed to get it down while Maryland, UCLA and Marquette fattened up their college basketball records on home cooking.

Elsewhere, Cincinnati and Alabama, a couple of other Top Ten teams, found that the road was no place to celebrate the winter holidays. Both went down to defeat in a busy night of tournament action Monday.

The Indiana Hoosiers, easy winners over Columbia and Manhattan in the first two rounds of the Holiday Festival in New York, found St. John's to be a considerably tougher city foe in the final. They were never able to pull away and, with five minutes to go, the 15th-ranked Redmen climbed into a 65-65 tie.

Then Scott May, Indiana's All-American forward and the tourney's Most Valuable Player, took command. He hit a jumper to put the Hoosiers ahead to stay, then added five more points to keep the Redmen at bay as Indiana pulled out a 76-69 victory.

May led all scorers with 29 points for Indiana, 9-0.

"St. John's is a heck of a smart team," praised Indiana Coach Bobby Knight. "It took a great team effort to beat them — and we got it."

Lou Carnesecca, coach of the Redmen, was beaming over his club's effort before a screaming capacity throng of 19,694 at Madison Square Garden.

"I'm proud of my kids," he said. "People came to see the New York kids play the No. 1 team in the country, and I hope we proved to one and all that we have a fine club."

Things were easier for second-ranked Maryland, which broke out to a 24-9 lead at the start and went on to trounce Seton Hall 104-69 in the opener of the Maryland Invitational. John Lucas had 12 of his game-high 21 points in that spurt for the Terrapins, 8-0.

In the nightcap of the double-header, Princeton stunned eighth-ranked Alabama 61-59, dealing the Tide its first loss after six victories. Armond Hill scored 20 points for the Ivy Leaguers, who built a 56-42 lead with 7:28 to go and then hung on to win.

Princeton Coach Pete Carril approaches tonight's game against Maryland in the tournament finale with caution. "I'm afraid we're too tired to play that team," he said of the speedy Terrapins. "We have a slow team and it takes us more effort to get things done."

"Give Princeton credit," said Alabama Coach C. M. Newton.

"They set the tempo of the game early. Our shot selection was all right, but I don't know why they didn't go in."

Fourth-ranked UCLA had a surprisingly tough time in the opening round of its Bruin Classic but pulled out a 52-48 decision over well-disciplined Santa Clara. Andre McCarter converted three free throws in the final 41 seconds to preserve UCLA's 88th victory in a row at Pauley Pavilion.

The Bruins, 7-1, will face Purdue, an 80-77 winner over St. Louis, in the tournament final tonight.

UCLA led early 21-11, but Santa Clara fought back to a 27-27 tie at halftime. A three-point play by Marques Johnson put the Bruins ahead to stay at 46-43 with 7:34 to go, and the clutch foul shooting by McCarter kept them there. Johnson took scoring honors with 28 points.

Bo Ellis and Earl Tatum scored 17 points apiece and sixth-ranked Marquette pulled away in the second half and beat Miami of Ohio 79-52 in the Milwaukee Classic. In the final, the Warriors, 6-1, will face the tournament's co-host, Wisconsin, which beat Stanford 70-64 on four free throws by Brian Colbert and three by Pete Brey in the final 1.21.

Seventh-ranked Cincinnati, meanwhile, suffered its second loss in two games at the Rainbow Classic in Honolulu, bowing to Holy Cross 66-65.

Leopards win consolation tilt

CHICO — La Verne College advanced to the consolation finals of the Chico Invitational Basketball Tournament with a convincing 81-58 win over McAllister College Monday night at Chico State.

The Leos will face a familar rival in the consolation championship as the locals will square off against Whittier. Whittier defeated Sacramento State Monday in an afternoon contest.

La Verne showed no signs of a letdown after its narrow 55-54 loss to host team Chico St. Sunday, as the Leos took a immediate 2-0 lead against McAllister and never trailed in the contest.

Center Tim Gillette led the way for La Verne, canning 23 points and pulling down 12 rebounds. Dwight Washington and Mike Winze added 10 apiece for the victors. Tom Jorgensen topped McAllister, a Minnesota-based private college, with 16 points and nine rebounds.

The Leopards were hot from the floor, hitting on 53 percent of their shots as compared to McAllister's 39 percent. La Verne also had a slight edge in rebounds, 41-38.

La Verne, now 5-5 on the season, will try to go over the .500 mark against Whittier's Poets tonight at 5:45 p.m.

The Americas have no camels, but South America has a close relative in the guanaco (pronounced guan NAH goh).

This untamed cousin of the llama lives in the remote parts of the Andes. Unlike the camel, the guanaco has no hump, and a fully grown guanaco is only about 4 feet high at the shoulders.

It has, however, the camel's cloven, padden hooves and long, gracefully curved neck.

Like the camel and llama, the guanaco is easily annoyed. It will spit its evil-smelling saliva at anything nearby, including zoo visitors.

Its coarse, rough coat, usually reddish brown, is not valued for wool, as is the long, silky hair of still two other llamalike relatives, the vicuna and alpaca.

Guanacos are important to the people of the Andes as a source of food.

Once living in herds of 200 or more, wild guanacos are becoming rarer because of hunting and because their ranges are being fenced.

A pocket radio, camera, World Almanac globe or other fine prize will be awarded to the first youngster sending in a question used here. Send your question and your age to Johnny Wonder, (c/o this newspaper), Box 1335 (DA), Santa Cruz, CA 95061.

Philip Morris Announces The First Major Step Since The Filter Cigarette.

'Enriched Flavor'™ discovery revealed for new low tar cigarette.

Ever since filters were first introduced to cigarettes the trend has been to limit cigarette tar.

And with every new refinement in filtration, the tar levels went down.

Unfortunately, in most cases so did the taste.

Regardless of all the "low tar, good taste" claims you've read; regardless of all the fancy filters and space-age filtering systems you've tried—your own taste told you: the less tar, the less taste.

This is a report on a new kind of cigarette.

MERIT. Only 9 mg. of tar. One of the lowest tar levels in smoking today.

Yet with incredible flavor.

If you're looking to become a low tar smoker, or don't particularly enjoy the taste of the low tar brand you smoke now—you'll be interested.

Smoke Cracked: 'Enriched Flavor'

After a twelve year research effort, a team of scientists at our Richmond Research Center succeeded in isolating the "key" flavor ingredients of tobacco as they exist in cigarette smoke.

By adding only those ingredients which were of extreme high quality as flavor producers yet low tar producing as well, we're now able to pack incredible flavor into a cigarette without the usual corresponding increase in tar.

The discovery is called 'Enriched Flavor'.

'Enriched Flavor'. It's extra flavor. Natural flavor. Flavor that can't burn out, can't drop out, can't do anything but come through.

MERIT and MERIT MENTHOL

We packed 'Enriched Flavor' into the tobacco used to make MERIT.

And began an extensive series of taste tests.

The results were startling.

Taste-Tested By People Like You

9 mg. tar MERIT was taste-tested against five current leading low tar cigarette brands ranging from 11 mg. to 15 mg. tar.

Thousands of filter smokers were involved, smokers like yourself, all tested at home.*

The results were conclusive:

Even if the cigarette tested had 60% more tar, a significant majority of all smokers tested reported new 'Enriched Flavor' MERIT delivered more taste.

Repeat: delivered more taste.

In similar tests against 11 mg. to 15 mg. menthol brands, 9 mg. tar MERIT MENTHOL performed strongly too, delivering as much—or more—taste than the higher tar brands tested.

You've been smoking "low tar, good taste" claims long enough. Now you've got the cigarette.

MERIT. Incredible smoking pleasure at only 9 mg. tar.

'100 years of Amer. Forestry'

PASADENA — Contributing to the spectacular beauty of the 87th Annual Tournament of Roses in Pasadena Thursday will be an entry, "One Hundred Years of Forestry," sponsored by the city of Torrance in cooperation with the U. S. Forest Service.

Unique in the float's construction will be the decoration of 10 trees gracing the entry with actual bark stripped from forests and wooded areas from throughout the USA.

The 10 American forest trees from the different parts of the country providing the bark for the decoration of the float are: Douglas Fir from the Siskiyou National Forest, Grants Pass, Oregon; Koa from the private and state forests in Hawaii; Lodgepole Pine from Routt National Forest, Steamboat Springs, Colorado; Longleaf Pine from Kisatchie National Forest, Pineville, Louisiana; Paper Birch from Ottowa National Forest, Iron River, Michigan; Ponderosa Pine from Santa Fe National Forest, Santa Fe, New Mexico; Yellow Poplar from Monongahela National Forest, Marlinton, West Virginia; Redwood from Six Rivers National Forest, Eureka, Calif.; Sitka Spruce from private and state forests near Juneau, Alaska; and Sugar Maple from Ottawa National Forest, Iron River, Michigan.

The bark from the normal timber harvest was gathered by regular Forest Service personnel and Youth Conservation Corps members.

Artistic license was taken, and where the foliage was required, each tree was decorated with roses and chrysanthemums and countless blooms of other colorful flowers.

The natural beauty of this wooded scene is achieved to a further degree with a waterfall and lake. More than 1,000 gallons of water is required in the circulating pump system.

The theme of this year-beginning procession that officially launches the American Revolutionary Bicentennial is "America, Let's Celebrate," and the entry, "One Hundred Years of Forestry," has significant milestones to observe. These include the 100 years of the American Forestry Association (1875-1975) as well as the Centennial of Federal Forestry (1876-1976) with the authorization of the first Federal forestry agent on Aug. 15, 1876.

GRAND MARSHAL — Songstress Kate Smith will be the Grand Marshal for the 87th Annual Tournament of Roses Parade

Big Bros. to receive program proceeds

Over the counter sales of the Official 1976 Tournament of Roses Parade and Football Program in food markets throughout Los Angeles and Orange Counties will benefit fatherless kids.

The full-color programs contain illustrations of each of the 61 floats with explanations of how each one carries out the parade theme, "America, Let's Celebrate!" Pictures of winning floats from last year and floats in construction are included along with a short history of the parade.

Background information on the UCLA and Ohio State football teams are given with rosters for both teams.

Big Brothers is conducting the program sale in hopes of generating critically needed funds to extend the unique one man-one child service to thousands of eligible families.

The purpose of the Big Brother program is to match men with children whose fathers aren't around. It has proved especially effective in offsetting the delinquent tendencies that often occur in fatherless kids.

UCLA goes after another miracle

By DON BRADLEY
PB Staff Writer

LOS ANGELES — Can UCLA repeat the miracle of 10 years ago?

There are some interesting parallels.

On January 1, 1966, the Bruins stunned mighty Michigan St. with a 14-12 upset. The Uclans then, as now, went into the game with an 8-2-1 record. MSU was undefeated and united in 10 game. Ohio St. is 11-0 this year.

Then as now, the Big 10 team was a prohibitive favorite. The Spartans had defeated UCLA 13-3 in the season opener. Ohio St. walloped the Bruins 41-20 this year in the fourth game of the season.

Bruin coach Dick Vermeil presents an interesting mixture of contradictions going into his first Rose Bowl game.

On one hand, Vermeil sounds as though he doesn't think his Bruins have a chance against the powerful Buckeyes. On the other, he has worked his squad so hard, a committee of nine players representing the whole team protested the work schedule in preparing for Thursday's contest.

Boyish looking and seemingly naive at times, Vermeil's attitude toward those who feel the Bruins don't deserve to go to the Rose Bowl is one of outspoken resentment.

"If we could win, I'd enjoy telling those people who think somebody should have gone where to go," he said without a trace of a smile.

My kids worked hard and earned the right to go. But for some reason, some people felt some other team should go. Our players and coaches were upset about that. If we could win, it would prove a pretty good team DID go."

The Bruins are at LEAST a pretty good team. In John Sciarra, they have one of the more formidable all-purpose weapons in collegiate football.

The little (5-9½, 172 pounds) signal caller passed for 1,101 yards and ran for 806 while scoring 14 touchdowns to lead the team. He finished highest among the quarterbacks in the Heisman balloting.

Injured in the middle three games of the season (slight shoulder separation), he also has had to contend with painful bone-chips in his ankle.

"John is 100 per cent now," said Vermeil. He's been outstanding in practice. I've never seen him look better. In Sciarra we have a great quarterback who on a broken play can come up with a big play."

Wendell Tyler can be a game breaker. The 5-10, 184-pound junior averaged 6.5 yards per carry this year (1,216 yards on 187 rushes).

"If we gave the ball to Wendell Tyler 20 times a game, he'd gain a hundred yards a game," commented Vermeil. On given days, Wendell has been a great back. On other days he's been just so so."

Tyler is working on a streak of three 100 or more yard-games in a row and had seven during the regular season. Fumbling has been his problem.

Eddie Ayers, a 5-10, 185-pound senior, is the Bruins' number two runner behind Tyler and Sciarra. UCLA calls Tyler "pound for pound the best blocker among running backs in the country." But Ayers averaged 4.7 yards a carry (663 yards in 142 runs).

So it shapes up as a battle between two high scoring teams with very talented backfields. The Buckeyes scored 374 points in 11 games. The Uclans scored 326.

The rub is Ohio St. held the opposition to just 79 points while the Bruins gave up 233.

"The key is keeping their gains to a minimum," said Vermeil, "say four yards average. It's pretty hard to go the length of the football field four yards at a time. What they have been so successful at when they're slowed down is coming up with a big pass or run.

"If we can prevent that and keep it close, then we can win. We have too many fine players not to score points. How many we can score I don't know. I think we can definitely score four touchdowns. We scored three last time and we should have scored four."

That sounds pretty logical. But then Vermeil gives you the other side of the coin and you wonder if it really isn't hopeless after all.

"I feel if each player individually plays the best ball game of his life and we can put that together as a team and play the best we've ever played, we have an opportunity to win. And if Ohio St. cooperates and doesn't play quite as good as it's capable of, it will help."

Naturally, Vermeil was asked if he would key on two-time Heisman Trophy winner, Archie Griffin.

"Well they run the I formation as you know and it's really tough to key on the I back," Vermeil reasoned. "You have to watch out for the fullback plus they run options with their fine quarterback

It's really hard to zero in on Archie. You can shut off the point of attack for Archie but he'll make as many yards running away from it. That's the advantage of the I formation. The big thing you have to do is maintain good disciplined defense in fundamental movement and pursuit.

"I don't mean it as any knock on Archie or any of the great tailbacks," Vermeil continued. "But you have one back sitting back there carrying the ball the biggest percentage of the time in the I. If he doesn't gain 150 yards, then your offense is not going to make many yards."

"I just believe in most cases Archie is going to get his hundred or more yards. He didn't against Michigan. Michigan is a great defensive team with great movement and quickness. We don't have that kind of movement and quickness, but maybe we're a little more physical. I hope so."

The youthful looking coach feels his team is much improved over the one that lost to the Buckeyes in October.

Is this Woody's best Buckeye team?

By DON BRADLEY
PB Staff Writer

PASADENA — Woody Hayes says he won't answer the question until after Thursday's Rose Bowl game. But the Ohio St. coach keeps hinting that this is his best football team.

Certainly he appears to be more pleased with the team leaders than he has with any other group he's brought to California for the holidays.

Hayes has won five Rose Bowl games and lost three. Stanford deal him his first loss in 1971 (after he'd won all four previous appearances).

The last three years, USC has provided the opposition. John McKay won in 1972 and 1974. Woody won in 1973.

But Hayes has never displayed the fondness for a team than he has for the 1975 Buckeyes. And he seldom speaks of his team without referring to three seniors, Archie Griffin, Cornelius Greene and Brian Baschnagel.

They make up three fourths of his starting backfield. The fourth, fullback Pete Johnson, is only a junior. A bruising, 6-1, 243 pounds, Johnson scored 24 touchdowns this year.

Asked if coming out to the Rose Bowl the fourth straight time, had brought about any discernable change in attitude in his players, Hayes replied:

"No. The ones that come to mind first are Arch, Brian, and "Corny" (Greene). If anything they're a little more dedicated. Our older players (seniors) direct the thinking of the rest of the squad and I couldn't ask for better fellows. We've had senioritis with some of our teams, but these fellows have been great leaders all year long."

When Woody talks of the three which he does frequently, his eyes light up, his cheeks glow, he smiles and looks for all the world like a proud father.

Baschnagel, the wingback, is little known which is strange because he's been the Buckeyes' starting wingback four years. An Academic All-American, the 6-0, 190-pounder has been the team's leading pass receiver the last two years.

"He's definitely our best blocking back, says Hayes. Besides being a fine receiver, he's averaged 8-9 yards a carry the last two years although we don't run him very often.

"Brian is a great football player. He and Arch are just about the highest quality kids I've ever had. He could play any position in the backfield except quarterback. I think he could play any position in the line better than any other player on the team! He can do just about anything and he IS WILLING TO DO IT.

"He was up for a Rhodes Scholarship," Hayes continued, "and didn't make it. All I can say is that they had to have some Superman if they could pass him over. I've never seen a man with more excellence in his picture than Brian Baschnagel and I've seen some great ones."

The thing that impresses Hayes most about Baschnagel is that the wingback had better high school credentials as a running back than Griffin, the two-time Heiseman Trophy winner. At North Allegeny High, Baschnagel ran for 450 yards in a single game (and 391 in another).

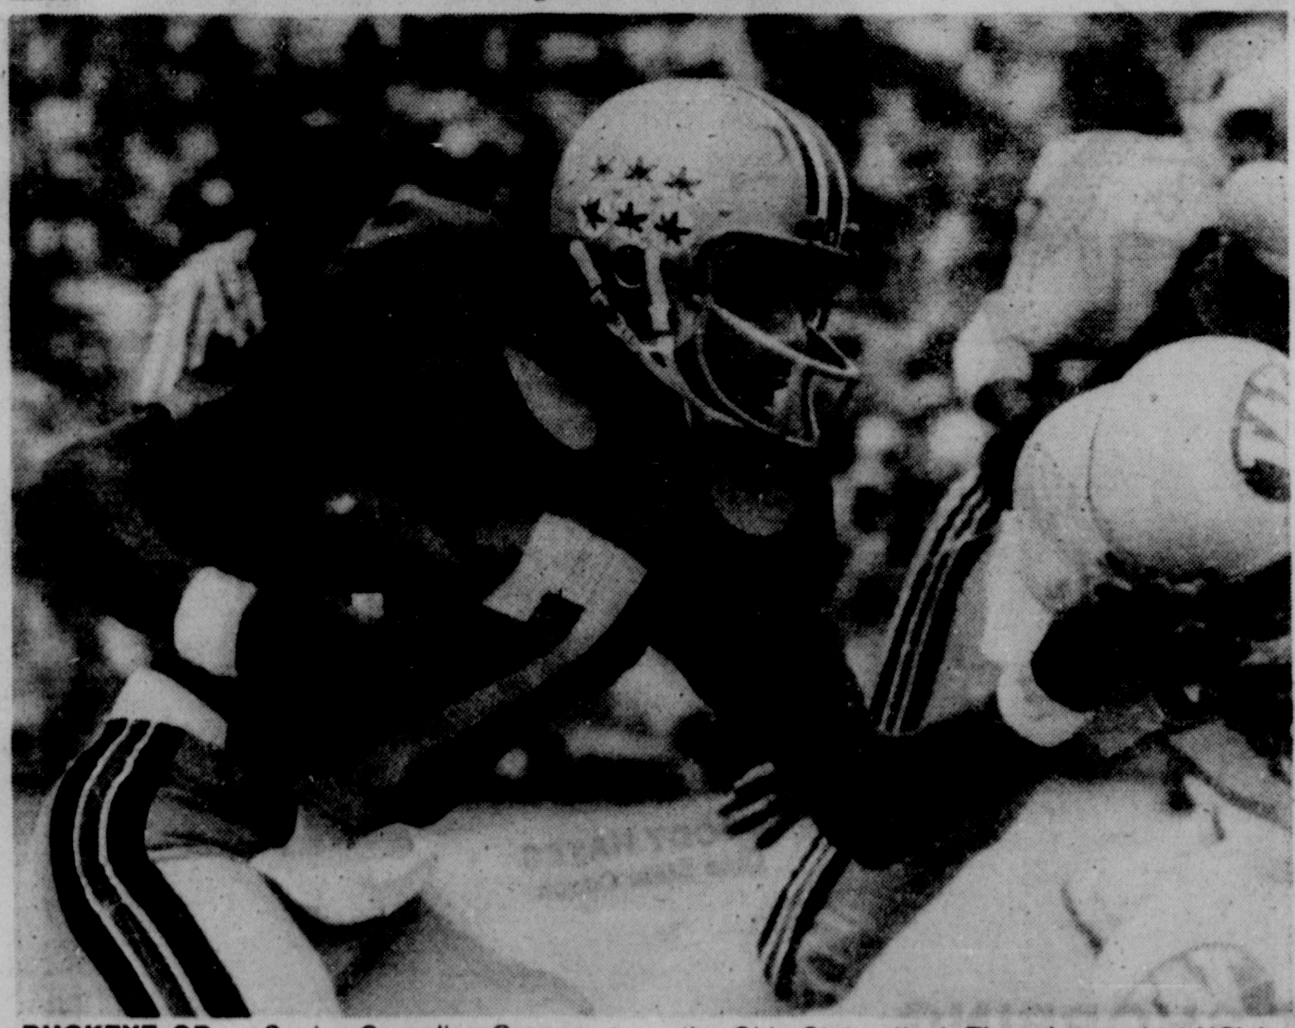
"He's a great running back," said Woody. But Arch (Griffin) is a little better at tailback and we have lots bigger fullbacks. So we put him at tailback. He'd like to run with the ball and he'd like to catch it more. But that doesn't stop him from being a great blocker."

Woody doesn't talk as much about Griffin since most people are aware of his accomplishments. But they are amazing. At 5-9, 182 pounds, Archie Griffin has started all but the first two games of his freshman year, a total of 43 in all. Michigan ended his amazing string of 31 consecutive regular season games with more than 100 yards rushing. Including the Rose Bowl games, he has gained 5,496 yards in 907 carries.

The LOWEST average yards per carry he has was 5.4 in his freshman year. He was twice named the Big Ten's MVP, a string broken this year by Greene.

"Our tailback is our most talented athlete," said Hayes simply.

(Pleae turn to Page 10, Col. 1)



BUCKEYE QB — Senior Cornelius Greene, a veteran of three Rose Bowls, will be directing the Ohio State attack Thursday against UCLA. He is Ohio State's MVP.

Bruins look for upset about that," he said. "But we haven't played a team as good as Ohio St. since then. However I do believe we're a much sounder football team defensively. We're more mature and we are making fewer mistakes."

As for the player protest, the Bruins apparently thought Rose Bowl preparation would be a lark. On the fifth day of practice, a committee of nine protested and in a fullsquad meeting, complaints were aired.

"It worked out all right with no serious problems," Vermeil revealed. "We worked them hard, but the only reason we're where we are is because we worked hard, maybe harder than most other teams.

"Anything worth having is worth working for. Besides, there is only one person who is going to determine whether we're working too hard or not hard enough and that is me, not the squad."

Don't let the looks fool you. Under the boyish exterior lurks an iron willed football coach.

Ohio State's goal is national crown

There'll probably be a Griffin at tailback next year, too. Archie's brother, Ray, has been promised a shot at it. Ray, a 19-year-old sophomore, is a starting safety for the Buckeyes. At 5-9, 180 pounds, Ray made 62 tackles this year and is called the fastest player on defense and one of the hardest hitters.

Greene, impressive credentials of his own. A starter for three years, the slender (6-1, 172) signal caller has been the Big Ten's passing percentage leader the last two. He also has carried the ball well over 100 times each of the three years and has averaged OVER five yards a carry in that span.

"I don't understand the pros," complained Woody. I don't know if I'd be successful there, but I'd be looking for a guy like Greene. He's got a good arm. He's smart. He's coachable. He's a good runner and just a heck of an athlete. He's highly respected on our squad because he's a leader."

These are the key players that have given Hayes his fourth undefeated team (11-0). A win in the Rose Bowl will clinch the National Championship and Woody wants that badly.

Victory number four during the regular season was a 41-20 trouncing of Thursday's opponent, UCLA, in the Los Angeles Coliseum Oct. 4. But Hayes hasn't allowed his staff or his players any chance to be complacent.

While his players were in Burbank appearing on the Johnny Carson Show, Woody stayed behind to review in detail all the Rose Bowl practices to that date. "I wanted to make sure we hadn't missed anything," he explained. "We go over every phase of the game every day. It's imperative."

At his first press conference here upon arrival for the Rose Bowl, Woody told members of the press he hadn't come out here for a good time. "If I came out here to have a good time, we'd probably lose," he scoffed.

Woody isn't concerned with good times, only with winning.

Bruins get second shot

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ohio State 41, UCLA 20.

That was the score when they first met last Oct. 4 and only 10 weeks later UCLA's 11th-ranked Bruins say they feel they have a good chance to whip the top-ranked Buckeyes when next they meet, in the 62nd annual Rose Bowl Game on Thursday.

"I think we held them in awe the first time," said UCLA Coach Dick Vermeil. "We gave them too much credit. We were 14-point underdogs and they beat us by 21...but we led 7-0 for a while."

"We've just come together since then," said nose guard Cliff Frazier. "They beat us badly in the second quarter, but I thought we played very well in the second half against them.

"Before we played Ohio State, we were awed by their players—the Heisman Trophy winner, Archie Griffin, Woody Hayes, who is a legend—and everyone. They had a hell of a team.

"But after we played them in the first and second quarters, we realized they weren't supermen. We realized we could play with them. And now we know we can."

Wide receiver Norm Andersen was injured and didn't play in that first game, but he sat on the bench and recalls:

"Yes, we were in awe of them, there's no question about that. When the Buckeyes walk out there, in that red and gray with Woody behind them, well, it was something we'd never seen before. This is a pretty young team.

"But once we started popping, I think the guys knew we could play with 'em. You said. 'The dude is just a dude,' and we got over the fear of them."

Vermeil said his team's execution was excellent on the first series on which UCLA scored to take a 7-0 lead. "But things just got away from us. We broke down on two important short-yardage situations, then we had a 15-yard penalty on an extra point and they followed up with a successful onsides kick."

The smooth Buckeyes took advantage of every UCLA mistake and led 28-7 at halftime of that earlier game. Vermeil said his oft-maligned defense "played very well in the second half. Well, it was a 13-13 tie after intermission."

Frazier said UCLA's season, which now stands at 8-2-1, turned around defensively in the second half of that game.

"We proved ourselves. I feel our defense has been good all year, but that second half definitely gave us a lot of confidence... 13-13 tie in the second half for a young defensive team against No. 1."

All-American quarterback, John Sciarra said the Buckeyes showed "they are so well coached, because even when we tried something we thought would work against them, they stopped us the second time we tried it." He said UCLA's 7-0 lead was short-lived because of mistakes and when the Bruins tried to move the ball again, they were stopped cold.

Frazier said UCLA felt it could beat the Buckeyes last Oct. 4 and "we know it now."

Sciarra called Ohio State "a team with no weaknesses," and said that when UCLA scored first "it may have awakened them." He said, "They can take adversity and turn it around and make it work for them. We have to play perfectly, by not making any mistakes that'll beat us."

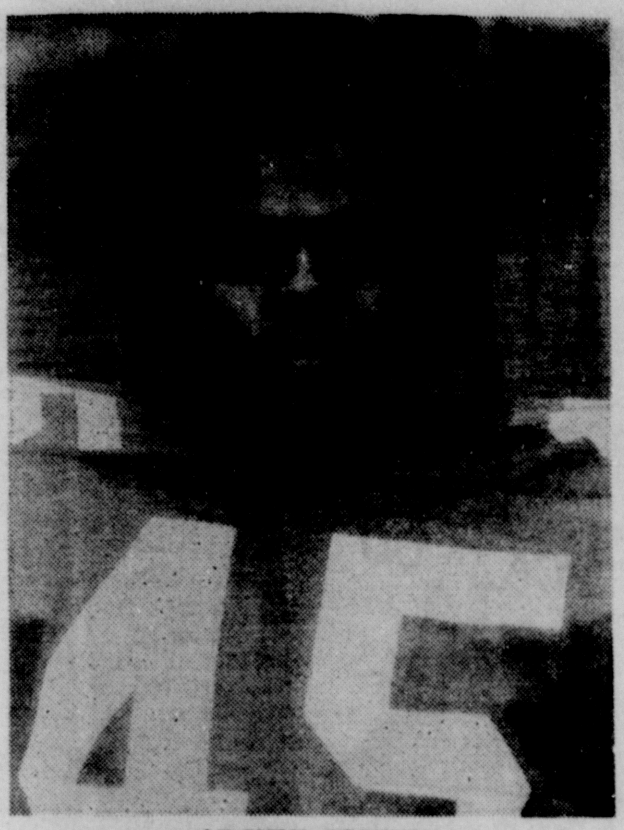
Wendell Tyler, UCLA's top running back who gained 76 yards in 12 carries against OSU in the teams' first meeting, was asked what he thought of Ohio State.

"They're big, physical and fast." Asked which defensive performer bothered him most, Tyler said, "Their entire front four. I got hit by all of 'em. It's a good thing I didn't get hit by all of 'em at the same time.

"I'd compare their defense to USC's except USC wasn't as aggressive as they have been in the past."

And he said UCLA's offense may pose a bit of a problem for the Buckeyes. "They're not used to seeing the Veer that often.

"But to beat them, our execution is gonna have to be perfect. When we played them the first time we were just getting the feel of playing with each other. Now we know each other well and we know what to do. We just have to do it."



ARCHIE GRIFFIN

Curry is happy to fight traffic

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dale Curry says he spent the last three New Year's Days "sitting at home, eating leftover turkey and cake" and watching Southern California and Ohio State wage their seemingly perennial Rose Bowl battle on television.

This year he'll forego the comforts of home to fight the "traffic" at the Rose Bowl, and the UCLA linebacker says he couldn't be happier over the prospect.

"It's been four years of hard work and a lot of frustration," the Bruin senior said of UCLA's struggle to make it to the Rose Bowl. "We'd lost out by losing to Southern Cal the last game of the season every year since I'd been here, and it seemed like we were never going to make it.

"I'm sure glad we did before I graduated."

While Curry is pleased with the chance to see the Rose Bowl close-up, he indicated he's concerned with some Ohio State "traffic" he'll be running into — Buckeye quarterback Cornelius Greene, fullback Pete Johnson and tailback Archie Griffin.

In the Oct. 4 regular season meeting between the teams, the Buckeyes rolled to a 41-20 victory over the Bruins. The versatile Greene ran for 120 yards and two touchdowns, plus throwing for 98 more yards. Two-time Heisman winner Griffin rushed for 160 yards and a touchdown, and Johnson, the Buckeyes' bruising 6-1, 248-pound fullback, added two more scores.

Curry, who made five solo tackles against Ohio State and was second on the team in tackles this season with 96, appeared most concerned with Greene in the rematch.

"In order to stop Ohio State," Curry said, "we have to stop Greene. I think he's their most dangerous player. People don't appreciate the fact that he's really a good passer. He has to do things consistently for them or their offense won't work."

Curry, a 6-2, 216-pounder from San Mateo, quickly added that the Bruin defense couldn't key too much on Greene, though.

"Johnson is a big, tough guy to bring down," Curry said. "And you certainly can't overlook Griffin."

Curry said he wasn't as concerned with Griffin as with Greene and Johnson. "I don't think we'll worry as much about Griffin as the others," Curry said. "Griffin mostly runs through holes."

Curry's respect for Ohio State was evident when he compared the two teams. "I think they're similiar to us...," he started a sentence. But then he broke it off with, "I really can't say they're similiar to us, they have just a great team."

He welcomes, however, the chance to play the Buckeyes again. "I think a team likes to play another that has beaten them," he commented. "I think it's a real challenge because they beat us decisively last time. I consider this a golden opportunity for us to prove something.

"And let me tell you something," he added emphatically, "I'm really confident we can."
